Serious Beef Breeders Take EPDs To Heart

ANDY ANDREWS

LOYSVILLE (Perry Co.) — Small, part-time beef breed operations can transform their operation from a mere hobby to a profitable enterprise if they take expected progeny differences (EPDs) to heart when selecting dams and sires.

The entire Pennsylvania beef industry, in fact, is at a major crossroads — they must either begin to use EPD and other herd performance records like serious breeders in most other states or suffer in an increasingly competitive industry, according to many experts.

Dr. Burleigh Anderson, VMD, Meadow Mist Farms, understands the importance of developing and using herd performance and EPD records when managing his stock. Anderson, who manages a

Recent Price Gain Makes Year Look Better For Dairy Farmers

KARL BERGER

FREDERICK Md. —A sharp turnaround in the Minnesota-Wisconsin manufacturing milk price in April has given credence to predictions that 1992 will be a far better year than 1991 for area dairy farmers.

The M-W, as the pricing measure is known, jumped 48 cents this past month, to $11.46 a hundredweight for 3.5-percent-fat milk. The U.S. Department of Agriculture uses the M-W to set prices in its nationwide federal order

Polish Agricultural Advisors Observe American Industry

MANHEIM (Lancaster Co.) — In an effort to help Polish farmers, two representatives from the Agricultural Advisory Centre in Boguchwala toured Lancaster County farms this week.

Former Lancaster County Cooperative Extension Director Jay Irwin hosted the Polish visitors, Josef Flaga, director of the Ag Centre, and Josefa Wilczak, economist and interpreter.

"It's a delight to have these two special guests visit us," Irwin said. "They were instrumental in helping me with my work in Poland."

Last year, Irwin spent six months in Poland where he taught marketing skills and laid the groundwork for setting up western cooperatives.

Irwin took along slides of local farms, which he used to show the Polish people how farming is done in Pennsylvania. One of those farms was the poultry operation of J. LeRoy and Judy Esbenshade of Manheim.

When the guests arrived at the Esbenshade farm on Tuesday, they immediately recognized the farm as the one that Irwin had photographed, which is known as one of the most attractive farms in the county.

The Esbenshades cash crop hay, corn, and soybeans on their 107-acre farm and on an additional 85 acres that they rent. They own 90,000 layers and showed the guests how the eggs are packed.

The Esbenshade operation is much larger than those in Poland,

Ed Board Puts Ag In School

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The state Board of Education Thursday adopted wording changes in regulations that would put agriculture into regular school curricula.

The changes are to board regulations that concern a list of required subjects schools must offer. The regulations allow local district discretion.

Thursday's action by the board remains a proposal until given final approval by several reviewing boards.

However, while the changes are still to be reviewed, the board also put them on a fast-track because of the support for change already

Turkey Houses The Length Of Three Football Fields

Perhaps the longest turkey raising building east of the Mississippi River, the roofs on this pair of 915-foot long buildings stand out against the less reflective greenery in the southeastern part of Lebanon County. The buildings are actually longer than three football fields stretched end-to-end. See story, page A26.

Delmarva Broiler/Fryer Market

Wednesday, May 13, 1992

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds remained good; supplies were adequate to short on the lighter weight sizes. Less than trucklot asking prices continued to trend higher at 55 to 65 cents. Live supplies were moderate overall; weights were desirable to mostly heavy. Processing schedules were heavy. The undertone was firm to higher. In the part complex, whole breasts were short and boneless skinless were in tight supply. Leg quarters were in active demand and firmly held. Boneless thighs were in good demand. Other parts were about adequate with wings in the heaviest position.

Northeast Chicken Parts

Wednesday, May 13, 1992

Trucklot buying interest continued very good. Boneless skinless breasts were short of covering immediate needs. Trading was a solid 2.20 with some product booked at 2.23 - 2.25. Line run breasts were extremely tight and most buyers could not locate necessary supplies for current needs. Prices trended higher. Demand for yellow skin leg quarters for late week and for next week needs was good and improving. Product booked this morning was at 23 - 24 cents. Buyer interest in wings improved over prior week, but product was available and a push to clear the market at steady prices.

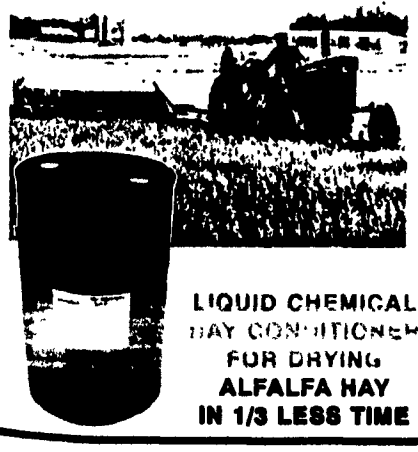
ALFALFA HAY CONDITIONER

NEW!



LIQUID CHEMICAL HAY CONDITIONER FOR DRYING ALFALFA HAY IN 1/3 LESS TIME

Alfalfa and other legume crops have a coating of wax. While this coating is a natural protection for the growing plant, it is an inhibitor to moisture loss in field curing and to feed utilization in the digestive system of ruminant animals. The presence of this coating of wax also makes the hay stem brittle and less palatable to livestock.

Swather's Choice "washes off" the outside waxy coating of alfalfa, allowing for the water inside the plant to evaporate more rapidly than in untreated hay. Swather's Choice is actually a soap that is safe for livestock consumption and won't affect palatability.

In studies at Michigan State University, hay treated with the ingredients in Swather's Choice had higher protein and lower fiber. In a further study at Utah State University, cows consumed 2.2 pounds more treated hay per day.

Unlike conventional granular drying agents, Swather's Choice is a liquid chemical hay conditioner. It is easily tank mixed with water and requires only fifteen gallons per acre in most applications, compared with the conventional products that are normally applied at 30 gallons per acre.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

MAY 18-24, 1992

A MAGNETIC PERSONALITY

Franz (Friedrich) Anton Mesmer became famous in his lifetime, but not as he had hoped. Dr. Mesmer believed he could utilize a magnetic power to cure disease, and his "animal magnetism" treatments did heal some people. But his methods were his downfall. Dressed in colorful, flowing astrologer's robes and waving a magic wand, he treated his patients in circular groups in dimly lit rooms. Not too surprisingly, a commission ordered by Louis XVI to investigate (which included Benjamin Franklin) declared Mesmer a charlatan. He fell into disfavor and died in obscurity in 1815. Neither Mesmer nor his peers understood that it was his hypnotic powers that caused the cures. Later researchers, like Freud, realized there was more than quackery in the good doctor's mesmerizing ways.

Truth is the safest lie. — Yiddish Proverb

TIP OF THE WEEK

EARTHWISE

Dogs and cats just naturally mark their territories. If your shrubs and gardens are considered part of their turf, there's an easy, nontoxic way to redraw the boundary lines. Grind a few cloves of garlic and 3-4 red hot peppers in the blender. Combine this mixture and a few drops of dishwashing liquid in a bucketful of water and sprinkle around your gardens and bushes. Your furry friends will seek greener (and less aromatic) pastures.

KEDGEREE

3 hard-boiled eggs, chopped
2 cups hot, cooked rice
2 cups cooked, flaked fish
⅓ cup cream
2 tablespoons melted butter
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
dash of nutmeg or mace

Mix all ingredients together well in top of a double boiler. Heat carefully over boiling water until heated through. Serve for a traditional breakfast or a light lunch.

Makes 6-8 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

NORTHEAST: Light rain, sunny and seasonable north, then sunny and warm; a few showers, some heavy rain and cooler.

SOUTHEAST: Clear and warm followed by some showers and milder. Finally sunny and hot.

MIDWEST: Showers and warm, some sun, then a cold wave with heavier rain.

NORTHWEST: Sunshine and showers, cold and wet along the coast, then sunny. Finally, cooler and rainy.

SOUTHWEST: Light rain, cool, some sun; heavy rain, flooding far east, clearing and warming west.

THERE'S A GUARANTEED MARKET FOR BUCKWHEAT!

Looking for an alternate to typical grains as a cash crop?

Buckwheat could be your answer!

Unlike other small grain crops that require increasingly costly inputs and are subject to unstable prices depending on crop size, gov't. programs and fluctuating export markets — buckwheat can be grown under contract to us with both the price and the market guaranteed before you plant. Consequently more and more growers in this area are including substantial buckwheat acreage in their planting schedule.

There are definite advantages:

- ☑ Guaranteed Market
- ☑ Guaranteed Price
- ☑ Growing Buckwheat offers savings in labor, fuel and other inputs since it requires little or no fertilizer, no herbicides or insecticides, it improves the soil and can be planted up to July 10.

* We guarantee to buy the crop this Fall from our Contract Growers. But you need a Contract.

Don't delay. Contact us right away before acreage requirements for this year are filled.

OPINION

Get Things In Order

American agriculture is graying. According to the 1987 U.S. Department of Agriculture Census, between 1982 and 1987 the number of farmers under the age of 25 fell by 42.5 percent. Twenty-one percent were 65 or older, and nearly half the nation's farm assets were held by farmers who were at least 55.

According to the spring issue of Farmland Update, the newsletter of the American Farmland Trust's northeastern office, in 1969, retirement-age farmers accounted for only 12 percent of the farm population. By 1987 the digits had reversed to 21 percent. Meanwhile, especially in the northeast, urban sprawl and development pressure drove property values beyond the reach of commercial agriculture. Estate and other taxes made it even more difficult for regional farmers to stay in business.

Farming takes a huge personal and financial investment. This makes farm transfer a very difficult issue. A farmer needs an estate plan to lay out a framework for a smooth transition of ownership and management. A will alone does not secure the future of a farm.

Inheritance taxes are one big reason why a will is not enough. Although land values once may have been low enough for typical farm earnings to cover taxes, this is rarely true today. Since inheritance taxes are assessed at death and based on the "highest and best use" of land, property values are often appraised well above farm earnings. Estates worth more than $600,000 are subject to federal taxes on top of state and local taxes. With only a will, heirs to a 250-acre dairy farm appraised at $2,500 per acre could be liable for taxes beginning at 37 percent on the land value alone! Estate plans can save unsuspecting families from having to sell their farms to settle with the Internal Revenue Service. They can offset the settlement problems that arise because land is not a liquid asset, and provide for family members' needs — even those who leave the farm. Good plans allow farmers to retire, provide for unforeseen disability and even protect their land forever. Professional advisors, from attorneys and financial planners to conservation organizations, can help create estate plans tailor-made for farmers' special needs.

No one likes to think about death, but for farm families a child is not enough to keep the farm in the family. You need to get things in order now.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Avoid Soil Compaction

Soil compaction, whether on the surface or in the subsoil, may reduce yields and rob profits. With compaction, plant growth may be significantly reduced.

In one study at Purdue University, plant height was reduced by 20 per cent with moderate soil compaction. The increased size of field equipment used on farms, several wet seasons, and the lack of cold winters have contributed to soil compaction.

Compaction will show up in many ways, including reduced drainage, increased runoff, increases in denitrification, increase in the power requirements to work the soil, damage to a growing crop, and reduced yields.

Plants growing on compacted soils will have reduced root growth often limited to horizontal growth, uneven plant height, show signs of herbicide injury when proper rates are used, and nitrogen deficiency when adequate nitrogen is present in the soil.

Improving soils which have been compacted takes time and may involve spending money to achieve deep tillage.

The most cost-effective way to treat soil compaction is avoidance. To reduce soil compaction, avoid tillage and traffic on wet soils, avoid deep tillage in the spring on poorly drained and somewhat poorly drained soils, limit or control traffic in fields, and avoid unnecessary tillage which hastens organic matter decomposition.

To Consider Rotational Grazing

While pastures are not a major source of feed for many local farmers, they still have some benefits.

Pastures provide some fresh feed, a reprieve from concrete, and an opportunity to get some sunshine and exercise.

To help pastures become more productive and something more than a muddy exercise lot, divide them into several paddocks. Then graze the paddocks on a rotational basis.

To avoid overgrazing, fence off a small well drained area to be used as a barnyard or as a sacrifice lot. When the pastures are short or too wet to graze, cattle may be confined to the smaller area in order to protect the pasture sod.

To Deworm Pasture Cattle

Unfortunately, pastures may be a place where cattle, especially young stock, may pick up stomach worms.

Heifers infested with worms are unthrifty and do not grow well. For this reason, heifers should be dewormed about three weeks after being turned out to pasture.

Just as important as the first deworming is a second deworming done three weeks after the first. This second deworming will do a lot to reduce worm buildups on pastures.

Another good practice is not graze heifers on pastures that have been grazed by older cattle. If heifers and cows share the same pasture, it may be necessary to deworm the entire herd.

I almost entered the June Dairy Month Recipe Contest. I changed my mind when I looked at the picture of the prizes on B4, May 9 issue and realized I wouldn't know what to do with a prize if I became a winner.

Here at Ralaine Jerseys we don't have those black and white (generic?) cows. Ours are the basically brown kind that produce the high percentage of protein that adds the quality to milk and especially the cheese and yogurt.

Those who make country crafts invariably use the black and white cows for their focus. I understand that the crafters are probably not

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

LEARNING TO MEND

May 5, 1991

Background Scripture: 2 Corinthians 1:12-2:17.

Devotional Reading: Philippians 4:4-13.

Back in the 19th century, a denomination (which shall remain nameless) was torn asunder by a conflict that was fought under the banner of the theological disagreement on the doctrine of "entire sanctification." Today church historians acknowledge that essentially this split was the result of a personal conflict between two bishops, Smith and Jones (not their real names) who refused to acknowledge their antipathy and elevated the conflict to the level of doctrinal dispute. Members divided into "Smithites" or "Jonesites" and a small denomination became two even smaller ones. In 1962, when I became pastor of a church in a small town in Pennsylvania, I found that that conflict had split not only the community, but also whole families. And some of the wounds still had not healed.

LIVING SKIM MILK

Although church conflicts usually appear as matters of principle, all too often they are really clashes of personalities and they have done the cause of Christ a great deal of harm over the centuries. As someone had put it, "we preach whipped cream and live skim milk . " Our professions of love and reconciliation are often negated by our examples of strife and alienation, for people expect a higher level of behavior from Christians.

The problem is not just that churches are prone to the same personal conflicts as other human institutions — after all, churches are composed of acknowledged sinners — but that after almost 2,000 years they still are woefully deficient in healing their human conflicts. Church people, I have found, are much more likely to "fight for their convictions" than to "reconcile for the sake of Christ."

Church disputes have been with us since the beginning and 2 Corinthians give evidence of a serious one between the Apostle Paul and some members of the church in Corinth. Unfortunately— for the sake of our curiosity, at least— Paul doesn't tell us what was the cause of that dispute. He knew what it was about and he knew the Corinthians knew, so we can only infer some of the issues from his letters. Apparently some of his critics had accused him of vacillating because he first planned to visit Corinth and then later called it off. Some of the Corinthians may have interpreted this as a slight. At any rate, although we can only guess at what happened, the conflict was very serious.

REAFFIRM LOVE

But, although one of Paul's purposes is to defend himself against some of these charges, his greater purpose is to effect reconciliation. It appears that someone in the Corinth church was punished in some way as a result of this conflict: "For such a one this punishment by the majority is enough; so you should rather turn to forgive and comfort him...So I beg you to reaffirm your love for him...Anyone whom you forgive I also forgive" (2:6- 10).

I have rarely seen congregational conflicts end in reconciliation. Expulsion or walk-out is the usual result. Seldom, in the midst of these conflicts, have I even heard the word "love," let alone seen it in action. (I hope my experience is the exception rather than the rule.) It is understandable that in our churches we should sometimes disagree and even that sometimes these disagreements might cause personal and congregational disruption. But in the midst of these conflicts we need to hear Paul saying to us: "I beg you to reaffirm your love for him" (her, them).

MY HAT'S OFF TO YOU!
SO LONG, FROM UNCLE OTIS!
I'm afraid that this will be the last time that I will be visiting with you folks. With plans to move into other areas of the cartoon business it seems like the best time to officially retire UNCLE OTIS. I want to thank the folks at LANCASTER FARMING for giving me the opportunity to visit with you each week, for the past ten years. It has been fun. I want to sincerely wish you all the very best, and take care.

Round Bale Silage:

* Allows harvest at the correct stage of maturity with minimal leaf loss, resulting in higher value feed.
* Silage becomes a cash crop
* Low investment costs
* Flexible harvest of small or large amounts of crop
* Low horsepower and fuel requirements

Get the most out of round bale silage.
Start out with a TANCO Bale Wrapper and use only high quality stretch warp.

WHY ARE SO MANY ADDING TWO-WAY MOBILES?

"We added a two-way mobile radio system to improve our overall service. Avoiding costly downtime makes our customers, and us, more productive. With our Clearchannel system our service technicians are never out of touch."

Phil Wimer
Partner/Parts Manager
Landis Bros. Inc.

Why are more and more farms and businesses adding Clearchannel® mobile communications? Because they discovered the cost saving efficiencies two-way radio provides. Access your personnel readily, reduce costly delays, and react immediately to emergency needs from any location.

Don't get caught short in your busy season without good communications. See why so many are adding a Clearchannel mobile system. Call Triangle Communications for a demonstration in September and become eligible for a Bahamas vacation.

WE KEEP BUSINESS TALKING

Effective Dry Cow Nutrition Begins With New Sweetlix® En-Pro-Al® LactaMax® Blocks

Containing Zinpro® and Diamond V Yeast.®

New Sweetlix® En-Pro-Al® LactaMax® blocks are specifically formulated to prepare dry cows and springing heifers for lactation. The addition of Diamond V Yeast® culture, for maximum rumen fermentation, and Zinpros® proven ability, via field and university trials, to reduce somatic cell count can result in a positive impact on both the quality and quantity of milk produced when lactation begins. Furthermore, current research has shown that feeding selenium and Vitamin E during the dry period can decrease the incidence of mastitis. Add Sweetlix® En-Pro-Al's® predictable intake and you've got one heck of a dry cow program in a convenient 225 lb. non-returnable recyclable tub.

For maximum milk production and profitability, rely on new Sweetlix® En-Pro-Al® LactaMax® blocks.

- Provides supplemental protein and energy
- Contains proper levels of Vitamins A, D and E
- Predictable intake – daily consumption rate of 1-2 lbs. per head per day
- No waste. Won't dissolve in rain, snow, cold or heat
- No added salt
- Contains highly available forms of copper, cobalt and manganese.

For more information, or for the name of the dealer nearest you, call the Sweetlix® Hotline toll free, 800-323-2663

Foreign Visitors Come To Somerset County

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

BERLIN (Somerset Co.) — Jozefa Wilczak and Jozef Flaga from Rzeszow, Poland, spent Wednesday, May 6 visiting Somerset Co. with Penn State ag economists Tom Brewer and Lou Moore.

The purpose of their journey was to see several potato farms and the modern Snyder Potato Chip factory situated at the town's east end.

With duties equal to their United States counterparts in cooperative extension service offices, Wilczak is an economics specialist and Flaga is a director. Last year they were hosts of Brewer and Moore, who were in Poland to observe, among other things, that country's production of its number one crop — potatoes.

Wilczak spoke the English language well. She said of her country's potato industry, "The people look for new processing lines, but we don't have the experience. We make french fries and potato pancakes."

As she spoke, Wilczak, like the others congregated on the upper level of Jim Ringler's barn, she shivered under her raspberry-colored all-weather coat. The culprit was a damp east wind that sliced menacingly through the parted sliding doors. If she failed to understand a question, she simply called, "Tom! Tom!" and Brewer came to her aid.

While Flaga toured the farm buildings with Ringler, she talked.

"I would like to receive more knowledge about cooperative," she said. "It is very difficult to talk to farmers (in her country). I would like to know who is responsible in cooperative."

She said potatoes are a big crop of Poland's many farmers but they are looking for a good market. In fact, Poland is said to rank second in world production of the tuber vegetable.

The other challenge to Poland's potato industry deals with the need for clean water during processing prior to marketing the various potato forms.

Jim and Bonnie Ringler, even with three hired men, are pretty much tied down to the family farm — the posterity of countless Ringler generations inhabiting the 174 original bicentennial acres. Besides operating a Holstein dairy, they raise hay, corn, small grains, and about 95 acres of potatoes on their three farms, now totaling 500 acres. Another hundred areas are rented.

Theirs was one of the two farms visited by Flaga and Wilczak. Besides Brewer and Moore, two representatives from Snyder of Berlin — John Blough and Dan Sharrett — joined the company of the visiting couple.

Ringler values the potential of his land. "There's no intensive grazing (of livestock)," he said. "Our potato ground is too valuable to pasture, that's all there is to it."

Bonnie said that in the summer the cows are put out only at night.

"It's too hot in the summer," said Jim, a Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Board member, "and we have plenty of fans in the barn to keep them cool. We can keep a peak (milk) production."

While she knows everything about the business because she's the bookkeeper, Bonnie said that farming is "a pain in the neck."

She says she stays clear of the barn unless there's an emergency situation requiring her to help with chores.

"My little niche is in the checkbook, paperwork, and the desk." As long as it keeps me out of the barn," she said, laughing. Learning the use of her computer was by trial, and error and reading the instruction book.

Despite her sentiments about farming, Bonnie is active on the Somerset County Dairy Promotion Board. She and Jim, with their four children, have always been a farm family, as were Jim's Ringler ancestors.

The offspring, however, aren't showing much promise as next-generation farmers. In fact, the only one coming close right now is daughter, Joyce, who has her own livestock artificial breeding business.

Son Douglas is perfectly happy working in computer programming analysis for the U.S. state department in Washington, D.C. Another son, Richard, is currently a tractor-trailer operator, while daughter Jennifer is a high school senior ready for her graduation

Bonnie Ringler, shown at her computer, says she will do anything to stay away from the barn.

Extension Office Faces Possible Budget Cuts, Closure

C. R. "Bud" Bryan, Delaware County extension director, eyes this location, a converted barn on the Garrett Williamson farm used as a 4-H site, as the soon-to-be home of some of the extension office. NEWTOWN SQUARE (Delaware Co.) — C. R. "Bud" Bryan reaches down to push the latch that props open the rickety, broken-down screen door at the entrance to a makeshift office. Tattered, used, musty smelling furniture lies about.

And the latch, as much in need of repair as the rest of the office, doesn't hold. Only a small gust of wind is needed to slam the door closed.

Bryan, Delaware County extension director, said the office may be adequate for three people, at most, and some files.

The extension director eyes this location, a converted barn on the Garrett Williamson farm used as a 4-H site, as the soon-to-be home of some of the extension office.

If they still have their jobs.

Because in a few weeks, Bryan has to follow through on the worst-case scenario, a nightmare extension offices in "other" states face: the loss of the extension office location and most of its funding.

On April 10, his office was notified by the Delaware County Council that, as of July 1, they must vacate the office, located at the Rose Tree Park along Rt. 252, and move everything out. Funding has been cut by 65 percent. Out of a budget of $150,000 (20 percent of their entire operating budget), the office has been promised only $50,000 for the entire year.

"We're getting substantial county cuts," said Bryan, sitting in a dilapidated sofa. "We are losing our secretaries, and next year the appropriation, the support from county, will be no more than $50,000 out of a normal budget of $150,000."

The county council has elected to cut the money, according to the letter, because of expected financial difficulties through budget year 1993. Substantial decreases in federal and state funding were cited in the letter.

"Penn State will not step in to replace county dollars," said Ted Alter, southeast region extension director. Alter emphasized that the extension system is a partnership of federal, state, and local governments, and "we believe that all three partners ought to be involved."

Alter said that the number of county dollars reduced will have a direct effect on the amount appropriated to the county by Penn State. The amount that Penn State will allocate (which was $402,908 in 1991, or about 55 percent of the county extension's total operating budget) will be reduced accordingly, according to Alter.

However, Alter told Lancaster Farming that Penn State's primary

100-cow breeding operation, keeps careful performance and EPD records on the animals he sells.

Now, it's up to the smaller Pennsylvania breed operations to more closely examine and put to use what breeders in other states have come to know — why EPDs can save money and prove profitable to beef enterprises.

Makes a difference

"It's a matter of awareness," said Anderson. "People just think they need a bull, that's all, it doesn't make any difference what he is. But it makes quite a difference."

Although about 60 percent of Anderson's business is in Pennsylvania commercial herds, a hefty 40 percent (20 percent purebred and 20 percent commercial) of the breeders are in other states.

And that's what Pennsylvania breeding operations must understand, according to John Comerford, Penn State beef specialist. To remain competitive and to take the business seriously, Pennsylvania breeders must come up to par.

Recently, Penn State began an on-site demonstration project involving two donated bulls to commercial herds in southwestern Pennsylvania. Comerford said the demonstration project is intended to compare bulls of known genetic potential through EPDs and performance records with bulls of unknown genetic ability in the same herd. Two ordinary bulls have been placed on seperate herds. The resulting data in their offspring will be studied to determine what the actual value of the two donated bulls are in the herds.

Can be profitable

"What we're trying to do with this whole bull selection program is to convince (breeders) that it can be a profitable enterprise. Buying bulls is like buying seed corn — the initial expense must be compared to potential production and profitability," said Comerford. "We can tell a beef animal is a bull by just looking at him, but we don't know if he is a potential herd sire unless we have the records to prove it."

Many bull buyers balk at the idea of spending $1,500 on a bull — but spread over the entire herd, the more profitable genetic characteristics more than make up for the cost.

Comerford said that a bull with an EPD of +20 (compared to the one at 0 EPD) would be 20 pounds per calf, worth about $16 today. "That increased value will be correct for each year he is used. The total additional value of the bull in a 30-cow herd would be almost $2,000 if the bull is used for four years," he said.

Many Pennsylvania breeders don't realize this, and the on-site project will provide the evidence on the importance of learning about and using EPDs.

Herd database

At Meadow Mist Farms, Anderson keeps an Angus Herd Improvement Records (AHIR) database. As a veterinarian who oversees more than 3,000 dairy cows, Anderson also manages his Angus cow/calf operation, keeping records on all progeny.

In the personal computer database, Anderson lists all detail regarding his herd, including performance data (in addition to registration number, birthdate, etc.) and a chronological sequence of data, from calf weight at birth, 205 days, one year, etc. (see the chart listed with this story). Also, records on EPDs are carefully obtained and monitored. The data can be sorted and printed out by any number of parameters.

The most important element about the database, according to Anderson, is that it gives him "something I cannot get anywhere else," he said.

"A person's ability to judge the value of a beef animal, up until 30 years ago, was soley on the basis of a judge giving an animal a blue ribbon at a show," he said. "And that means that animal looked good to somebody for five minutes in one show ring, and had absolutely nothing, in the foggiest, to do with the genetic value of that animal. Nothing to do with it. But it looked nice."

Dr. Burleigh Anderson, Meadow Mist Farms, manages a 100-cow breeding operation and keeps careful performance and EPD records on the animals he sells. He sells semen for about $15 a straw, $30 for an AI certificate. Here, Anderson checks the registration number on an embryo straw. Photo by Andy Andrews.

Hard evidence

Performance and EPD data provide the hard evidence for the performance of an animal.

Anderson said the dairy industry also keeps a "composite index" for herdstock, which includes, in Anderson's Angus cattle, "a low birthweight.

"So with this program, we can select on the basis of low birthweight, maximum weaning weight, maximum milk production (in the EPDs on cows), and maximum yearling weight," he said. "We can select on the basis of the expected progeny differences, and then also select on the basis of actual performance within the herd."

(Turn to Page A21)

Here, Anderson pours liquid nitrogen into a shipping container for embryos. About 20 embryos were on their way to Ohio recently. Sometime next year, Anderson will conduct a sale of about 75-80 cows, perhaps with the help of the Virginia Angus Association, in Culpepper, Va.

At Meadow Mist Farms, Anderson has designed a software program to help operate his AHIR database. The software is unique to his farm. In the database, Anderson lists all detail regarding his herd, including performance data (in addition to registration number, birthdate, etc.) and a chronological sequence of data, from calf weight at birth, 205 days, one year, etc.

Serious Beef Breeders

Anderson can program a seven-parameter sort to end up with a composite index on each one of his animals.

Work in environment

"It helps me," he said. "I want an animal with the lowest birthweight, the highest weaning weight, the most milk from the mother, and the highest yearling weight."

Comerford said that what Anderson is doing is "taking the EPD, which is the variation of the cattle from the average of the breed across the country, and then looking at how his animals work within the environment that he has for them.

"Now, whether that will breed in someone else's environment is a question — but the EPDs will breed across the board in the environment," said Comerford. The "environment" is the states in the Mid-Atlantic region. Some of the cattle would not perform to their genetic potential, for instance, in an arid environment such as the Southwest.

Anderson said that Penn State, through the work of Comerford, is trying to create an awareness in the state of Pennsylvania on the part of breeders and commercial cattle breeders on how to purchase a bull that has been created using this as a basis.

Understand environment

According to Comerford, breeders must completely understand their beef cattle environment and use that as a basis in which to work.

"It's pretty refined in other areas of the country where people make a living breeding beef cattle," said Anderson.

Anderson began his herd in 1959. He bought 11 heifers and another 14 heifers the next year from M.V. Hitt in Landenburg, Pa. At the time Anderson started, he said there was no open AI — you had to own the bull in order to register the calf.

"That was absolutely stupid," he said.

But after open AI was accepted, he immediately went to Wye Plantation in Queenstown, Md. and bought semen. During the years since, Anderson has increased the size of the herd, absorbing information from various universities about performance data and EPDs.

Other parameters

Anderson said the work of beef breeders such as Martin Jorgenson in Ideal, S.D. with performance testing, and "folks like John" Comerford, helped Anderson understand "that there were other parameters to select beef cattle by other than a purple ribbon," he said.

Anderson's herd is completely closed. He purchases semen from various agencies throughout the nation.

"The most important consideration is the expected progeny differences — birth, weaning, milk, and yearling, and then the degree of accuracy of those EPDs," he said. "The younger the bull, the lower the accuracy. The older the bull, the higher the accuracy. The number of progeny determine the accuracy of the expected progency differences."

When Anderson selects stock based on EPDs, he's not looking at the "maximum parameters" anymore. The optimum performance includes a balance of traits.

Balance vital

"We don't want the extremes," he said.

The "balance" is vital to the herd and the industry, according to Comerford.

The beef specialist said that if the entire industry continued to select for higher and higher yearling weights, "it increases mature size. Well, a problem with larger mature size is the increased maintenance cost of breeding animals — bigger cattle eat more feed," he said. "There's an end point."

"We want the smallest birthweight possible commensurate with acceptable growth," said Anderson. "But if you keep selecting for the smallest birthweight, you keep selecting for the smallest animal. So no matter what you do, there has to be a moderation somewhere down the line. It's an antagonistic situation."

Conduct sale

"And probably to the most elite breeders of purebred cattle, the next thing to do is select for these various things: udder size, teat size, udder shape, and confirmation of back legs," said Anderson.

Anderson sells semen for about $15 a straw — $30 for an AI certificate.

Sometime next year, Anderson will conduct a sale of about 75-80 of his cows, perhaps with the help of the Virginia Angus Association, in Culpepper, Va.

Bulls sold on the farm go for $100 to $200 less than at test stations, which furnish complete performance records of animals. In all of the western states, bull buyers take performance data and EPDs seriously and prices are commensurate with what they intend to purchase.

Today, There is an Alternative — FOIL®
Environmentally Sound Control of Insects on Potatoes

Ecogen Inc. developed Foil® Bioinsecticide from a novel genetic combination of three strains of Bt (Bacillus thuringiensis). As insects eat Foil, they immediately stop feeding and crop destruction is halted.

Foil is the only biological insecticide that is effective against both Colorado potato beetles and European corn borers. Foil makes a powerful alternative to chemical pesticides and other Bt products.

With environmental issues a concern for all growers, Foil is indeed today's alternative. Derived from Bt, a natural pesticide, Foil has no pre-harvest interval and does not contaminate ground water.

If you would like to find out how Foil can make a difference in your potato crop this year, call or write us at:

Extension Office

concern "is to keep quality programs in Delaware County."

He said that the Penn State Delaware County campus was suggested as an alternative site, but there is no space available to house an extension office. "The feeling is that the facility in the community ought to be close to the people of the community," he said.

It remains a possibility that some money could be allocated to help renovate the Williamson Farm as a possible location, but other options are still being considered as of presstime.

Alter emphasized that Penn State remains committed to supporting the office and that, as long as the county support is withdrawn, there will have to be "dramatic program reductions." Penn State will make a decision within the following weeks.

"The budget crunch is real," said Bryan. "But there's no other department that has a 50 or 65 percent reduction in support as is the case with cooperative extension. So, for some reason, cooperative extension was singled out."

Now, Bryan has rallied the support of 4-H and extension volunteers to help the council reconsider the budget arrangements. If the budget isn't reconsidered, many programs are in jeopardy, according to Bryan, including commercial ag, home economics, 4-H, the Master Gardener program, and home horticulture programs.

In all, about 5,030 4-H members, 380 volunteers, and numerous others in a wide array of projects are in jeopardy.

To help dissuade the council from cutting the funds, a project was launched a few weeks ago. An action sheet, "Delaware County Cooperative Extension Future At Risk," funded by the 4-H program, with help from volunteers at the extension, was mailed out to thousands of supporters, agribusiness, various schools, and other agencies to drum up support for the program.

The letter states that without the support of the county council, "your extension program will be severely cut back and possibly eliminated.

"We must vacate the Hunt Club building and 4-H Center at Rose Tree Park by July 1, and we have no other place to go. . . ."

According to the sheet, program offerings considered for reduction or elimination include school base 4-H and youth programming, home horticulture, pesticide applicator recertification, publications offered through the extension, summer programming, classes in home economics and family living, and other programs.

"We sincerely hope that we can continue to serve you, but our future is uncertain," it reads. The letter lists the contacts of the members of the county council, state and federal legislators, and other important contacts.

Meanwhile, Bryan and his staff are preparing for a worst-case scenario — moving the office to a less expensive location.

"It's going to be difficult operating procedures if we have to fragment the office and move part of the staff one place and part another," he said. "But we might have to go to that extreme."

Bryan said the staff is looking for low-cost facilities. "We're thinking, how much secretarial help can we afford to buy out of $50,000?"

Bryan said in that area of Delaware County (affected by high cost of living and expensive housing), an average secretary with benefits would cost about $20,000 a year. Office space, at about $15 a square foot, would quickly deplete the budget.

Bryan said they cannot afford to rent an office at the going market rate. "We've got to find some facilities cheaper than the going rate to house the staff."

Until then, Bryan waits on Penn State's decision about their dilemma. Either case, the county (which provides service contacts to about 96,000 people annually), already has been working on a bare-bones budget, according to Bryan.

"We've been working on less than an ideal budget for years," he said. "We have had no increases in our county budget for the last five years. So we've been working on a bare-bones budget to begin with."

Bryan looks at other surrounding counties which have seen increases in their budgets and additional staff. He thinks that Delaware, such as other counties in Pennsylvania and other states, may one day be consolidated.

Bryan also worries about the domino effect this could have on other counties also struggling with budget worries. Could those offices face elimination?

To prevent that, the action sheet, or "pink slip" as Bryan calls it, went out to extension supporters.

"We're asking them in a very positive way to conveny to key people what the extension program means to them and their community," he said. "Speak up and be heard — you don't want the extension program downsized. You want the extension program supported."

Cut Costs By Using EPDs

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — EPDs . . . Expected Progeny Differences. The mere thought of trying to learn how to use this type of breeding information can sometimes scare cattlemen away from a valuable resource.

However, EPDs are proving to be a significant cost-cutting tool for cattlemen as demand increases for higher-quality, cost-efficient cattle.

Today, most breed associations maintain current genetic information on all registered animals. This material is available to commercial breeders simply for the asking, and most times at no charge.

Dr. John Hough, director of education and research for the American Polled Hereford Association, said that EPDs are not mysterious, hard-to-understand numbers if a few basic principles are understood.

"The variability between animals is never totally genetic. EPDs are simply predictions of what is expected to occur. The more performance information available, the more accurate the EPDs," he said.

EPDs are calculated using information from three sources: the individual animal's own performance records, performance of its relatives and, finally and most importantly, performance of its progeny relative to contemporaries.

The information compiled in EPD records can be used to help determine a number of traits for your herd. EPDs are maintained for birth weight, weaning weight, yearling weight, milk production, scrotal circumference, and sometimes calving ease and other traits.

Buying bulls with complete EPD records makes substantial economic sense. By knowing what type of offspring the bull has the capability to produce, you can better predict performance from your herd and begin making herd improvements more efficiently.

Hough says it is important to be aware of EPD accuracies which can vary among bulls. A breed's sire summary will generally define the accuracy values of each animal. Some breed associations have begun to include complete histories of each bull listed in their summaries.

Hough emphasizes EPDs are a good tool only when used with complete understanding. One of the most important things to remember is not to compare EPDs across breeds. EPD values are only correct within a single breed.

Additional information on EPDs and how to use this cost-cutting management tool can be obtained from your county extension agent, your land-grant university, or a breed association.

Genetic Improvement In The Next Century

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Here's a summary of remarks made by Ben McDaniel, Professor of Animal Breeding at North Carolina State University, at the Large Dairy Herd Management Conference held recently at Gainesville, FL.

Although dairy cattle breeding will change extensively in the remainder of the 20th century and early in the 21st, many of its more useful current aspects will continue. Multiple lactation yields of milk, fat and protein will remain the dominant parts of economic merit.

Use of newer reproductive technologies such as embryo transfer will improve gene flow to the cow population and thus increase rates of genetic progress.

Genetic values for other economically important but lowly heritable traits such as reproductive efficiency, mastitis resistance, and early involuntary culling will become widely available. Their usefulness will depend on AI bulls having progeny numbers adequate for accurate evaluations early in life.

All genetic estimates will be included in selection indexes for selecting new breeding stock. Matings wili be to combine traits to maximize complementarity and heterozygosity but minimize inbreeding. Most, if not all, matings will be based on selection indexes.

Carriers of favorable single genes and chromosomal segments, and DNA markers closely linked to favorable ones will be identified soon after birth from among similar pedigrees, probably those of full brothers. Similarly, many animals that carry unfavorable ones will be eliminated and not used for a significant saving in costs of testing young bulls.

Tests for most, if not all, known deleterious recessive genes will be developed and used to screen breeding animals before they are widely used, further reducing the frequencies of recessive phenotypes.

Average Farm Feed Costs For Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's this week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania. Remember these are averages so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

PFA Pushes For Deer Permits

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Citing intolerable deer damage and insufficient action by the Game Commission, the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) is seeking help from the General Assembly.

In testimony Thursday before the House Republican Policy Committee Task Force on Deer Damage, PFA spokesman Leonard Crooke called for legislation to let farmers bring in hunters during the growing season to help eliminate deer causing crop damage.

Crooke, a Bucks County dairyman and a member of PFA's Wildlife Damage Control Committee, spoke at a field hearing of the task force in Stockertown, Northampton County.

PFA supports a "deer damage permit plan" that would allow farmers with crop damage to bring in one hunter for every 25 acres of farmland to harvest deer causing damage from August 1 until deer season begins.

While there are no recent studies of deer damage to farm crops, Crooke said, "The most recent statistical information dates back to 1981 when a Pennsylvania State University study indicated the annual economic impact due to deer damage in Pennsylvania was somewhere between $16 million and $30 million. Since that time, estimates of damage have been much higher."

Surveys conducted by PFA in 1988 and 1990, "indicate that 38 percent of Pennsylvnaia farms have intolerable levels of damage," Crooke said. A separate survey indicated the damage rate on affected farms averaged $4,000 per farm, Crooke added.

Over the years, PFA has asked the Game Commission to take steps to reduce the size of the deer herd and develop new programs to help individual farmers with severe problems.

"Attempts by the Game Commission to reduce the size of the deer herd have only this year begun to show some sign of success," Crooke testified. "Commission statistics, however, still show that most counties are over the recommended population level. Statewide, the anterless deer population still remains at more than 100,000 over the recommended level."

Furthermore, PFA said, Game Commission attempts to implement programs to aid individual farmers have also been unsuccessful.

"The general response by the Game Commission has been to indicate that the current law which allows farmers to destroy deer for crop damage is sufficient," Crooke said. "The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association disagrees with this, due to both the amount of time required, and the public pressure which is placed on farmers attempting to comply with the law."

A farm workload, which can include 18 hours of physical labor, "is especially great during times when deer are doing the most damage," Crooke said, "We cannot take time away from the few hours of sleep we do get to be and is heading for college next fall.

Asked what will happen to the 240 year-old-farm if none of the children want to work the land and operate the dairy, Jim simply shrugs his shoulders to indicate that he doesn't know. Yet, he isn't given to worrying about the possibility.

What troubles Jim is the difficulty farmers meet when seeking good hired help. "It's almost impossible to find good farm help," he said. "I just wish we could pay the going rate of pay like the steel mills and other big businesses. Farming is big business, but we ought to be able to make an equal wage."

Brewer says that Wilczak and Flaga, who were traveling separately, were selected to tour Pennsylvania because of its similarity to their home area. Also considered prior to their coming here was the need for greater knowledge for Polish farmers and improving the sales market for them.

He said, too, that following the visit he and Moore made to Poland last year, Jay and Betty Irwin of Lancaster County and George Greaser of Blair County spent six months in Poland acquiring needed information about the agriculture practices there.

harvesting and field dressing deer. In addition, many farmers who attempt to do this are physically threatened by those around them who do not understand the impact of the problem."

In 1990, PFA recommended a permit-hunting program to allow designated hunters to help farmers harvest deer for crop damage. "However, the Game Commission was adamantly opposed to this plan," Crooke said, "and an agreement was reached which led to the hotspot program."

The hotspot program allows hunters to take anterless deer on farms which suffered severe crop

2,4-D Can Be Used In No-Till Soybeans

WAYNE, N.J. — Farmers have another weed control option for no-till soybeans. Thanks to a recent EPA decision, growers can now use preplant applications of 2,4-D on no-till soybeans.

A "burndown" herbicide, 2,4-D can be tank-mixed with Scepter®, Scepter® 70 DG and Squadron® herbicides. Scepter and Squadron provide season-long residual control of more than 30 broadleaf weeds, including black nightshade, giant ragweed, pigweeds, lambsquarters, and c bur. 2,4-D offers economical burndown control of existing winter annual weeds. When tank-mixed together, these herbicides provide early control of the toughest weeds in no-till soybeans.

And when growers use Scepter, they get another advantage. University research shows after four-tenths of an inch of rainfall, only seven percent of Scepter remains on the crop residue. Because Scepter doesn't get tied up in crop residue, one application establishes the weed barrier no-till fields require.

Growers should consult labels for rates and other use instructions. 2,4-D should be applied 30 days prior to planting. For more information, contact a Cyanamid AgriCenter™ dealer or sales representative.

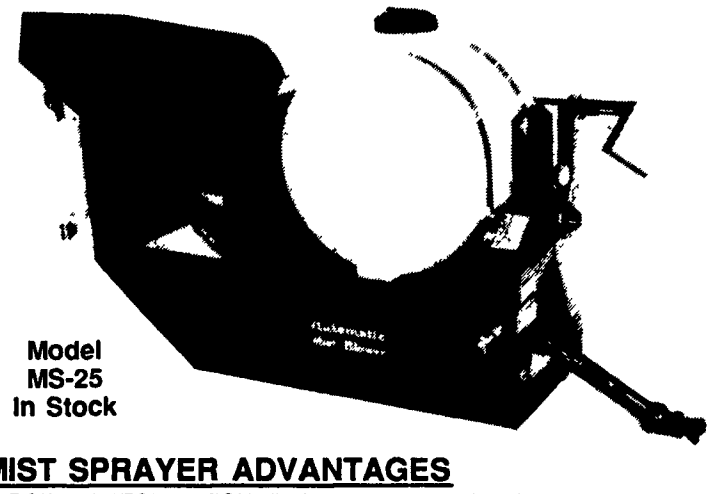
MIST SPRAYER

Row Crops, Vegetables, Orchards And Trees



Model MS-25 In Stock

MIST SPRAYER ADVANTAGES

1. ROTARY ATOMIZATION distributes an even size droplet spectrum that greatly improves penetration and coverage.
2. LOW FIRST COST compared with conventional sprayers with the same acreage capabilities.
3. COST LESS TO OPERATE: 50-90% savings on diluent. Water swaths at higher speeds with less tank fillings. Save a bundle on fuel.
4. SAVE ON COSTLY CHEMICAL. More complete coverage with 25-50% less chemical compared with conventional dilute solution sprayers.
5. LOW MAINTENANCE. Simple design with few moving parts means little upkeep. No down time due to repairs or plugged nozzles.
6. MORE EFFICIENT CONTROL as a result of fine particle efficiency through distribution of chemical.
7. COMPACT UNIT — use of smaller tractors and no booms to contend with.

Northwest Pennsylvania All-Breed Calf Sale Held

MEADVILLE (Crawford Co.) — The N.W. All-Breed Calf Sale was held at the Youth Show Arena of the Crawford County Fairgrounds, Meadville. Thirty-one registered calves were sold to the highest bidders by Auctioneer Mike Weimer, Emlenton, with assistance with 4-H'ers, Crystal Miller, Jason Hayes and Kathy Duncan. The 31 animals averaged $533.87.

Kari Lynn Mowry, RR 1, Sandy Lake, purchased the top selling animal of the sale for $1,050 — a Holstein senior calf, Black-Pine Sally Sibyl, born September 4, 1991. The calf was consigned by Richard Black of Black Pine Farm, RR 2, Saegertown. This calf was sired by Woodbine Valiant Eldon-ET.

The high selling Ayrshire was consigned by Janyelle Hunter of Janaron Farms, Saegertown, and was purchased for $850 by Kimberly Voorhies, Stoneboro. This calf is Janaron Milk Machine Penny, born September 6, 1991, and sired by Blackaddar Milk Machine ET.

Erin Raney of RR 1, Adamsville, and Holly Deeter of RR 1, Utica, each paid $550 for their Brown Swiss heifers that they purchased. Erin purchased Hay Lo Fernando Bette, born March 5, 1992, from Jason Hayes of Edinboro. This calf was sired by Kruse Combination Fernando. Holly Deeter purchased Ton-Dale Jinxson Katie, born June 21, 1991, from Janyelle Hunter of Saegertown. This calf was sired by Forest Lawn Jinxson ET.

Two Jersey calves sold for $450 each. One calf was purchased by Charles B. Mowry of Sandy Lake, and was consigned by Crystal Miller of Cambridge Springs. The calf was Justa-Ivan Cassanova Ladylove, born December 1, 1991, and sired by Verdurelea-Silver Cassanova.

The second Jersey calf was True-Value Royal Jennie, born March 2, 1992, and purchased by Mark Livingston of Jamestown. This calf's sire is J.S. Quicksilver Royal and she was consigned by Chris Hackett of Cochranton.

The high selling Guernsey calf was Foggy Meadows Herald Reva, purchased for $300 by Bobby Jo Schilling of Williamsburg. This calf was consigned by Candace Hitchcock of Russell, and the calf is sired by Glenville Herald.

Twenty-two of the thirty-one sale animals were purchased by 4-H or FFA youth for project animals. One of the goals of this sale is to make good calves available to youth for their 4-H project; this was certainly accomplished this year. The majority of this year's calves were purchased by Northwestern Pennsylvania buyers from Erie, Warren, Venango, Mercer and Crawford counties. The other goal of this sale is to include the youth in Crawford County in the "merchandising" of these calves at the sale. These youth assisted with reading pedigrees, clerking, taking bids, leading calves, washing, brushing, clipping, feeding, bedding, watering and caring for these calves. This year Beth Duncan, Rebecca Moose, and Janyelle Hunter did an exceptional job in reading the calves' pedigrees and assisting the auctioneer.

Others assisting in the sale included: Michael Allen; Philip Allen; Missy Dengler; Matthew and B.J. Dickey; Amber Donovan; Sara and Debbie Duncan; Heather Furry; Andrew and Jason Hoke; Jon and Jarrett Hunter; Stephen and Kim Kalinowski; Kellie, Chad and Jessica Kunz; Holly Manross; Jason, Kimberly, Crystal, and Jennifer Miller; Adam Raney; Brooks Rynd; Brenda Smith; David Uhlman Jr.; Jeremy and Matt Williams; and Chani Zilhaver.

Members of the Crawford County Holstein Club and colored breed representatives assisted in setting up the auction ring. Gary Miller and Clark Duncan offered their expertise in supervising the youth in preparing the calves for sale.

Additionally, all 4-H leaders and other volunteers assisted with the planning, selection of calves, and conducting this 19th annual sale sponsored by the area's dairy cattle breeders and the Crawford County Cooperative Extension.

Long Turkey House, Long Future

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

BUFFALO SPRINGS (Lebanon Co.) — The roofs of the pair of poultry houses gleam like a small lake in a valley near Buffalo Springs in Lebanon County.

Beneath those roofs are two of the longest turkey raising facilities in the East. At 915 feet, they are the longest poultry facility under contract to Round Hill turkey products, a $65 million-a-year turkey products producer which has markets in the New England and Middle Atlantic states.

Family farm operators Glenn Wenger and son Steve decided to invest a large sum of money in the building when figures showed that it would more than pay for itself within the 10-year contract they have to supply turkeys for Round Hill.

In addition, the family was looking at a way to expand as the family and family needs expanded, said Glenn and Steve during an open house held Tuesday at Wencrest Farm No.2.

"That's the way the whole thing is trending," Steve said, "toward larger operations. Bigger family farms. You don't want to take the family out of the farm."

And the Wengers have no intention of eliminating any immediate family from the farm.

But to protect cash flow, turkeys seemed like the answer, according to Steve.

The Wengers already raise hen turkeys and milk 90 cows at the first farm. The cow operation could have been expanded, but Glenn said his knees suffer from years of milking cows and managing the birds are more to his liking.

Glenn lives in the house of the new farm. He's mainly taking responsibility for the turkey raising while Steve, living at the home farm house, is milking the Holstein milking string with new brother-in-law Scott Baker.

The milking herd is no slouch, with a rolling herd average of 22,100 pounds of milk.

The Wengers also grow 320 acres of corn, 140 acres of soybeans, 50 acres wheat and 70 acres of alfalfa for haylage. The corn is taken in as silage, high moisture corn and the rest is shelled and sold.

The cows are fed a totally mixed ration and achieved higher production because of it, Steve said.

In addition, the Wengers raise all the bull calves as steer and market them through a local cattle broker. Currently they have 100 Holtein steers getting ready for market.

Financially, the best bet appeared to be expanding the turkey operation, they said.

They have a minimum guaranteed price of 4 cents per pound, and they can reasonably expect to turn over almost three batches of 40,000 mature tom turkeys each year, weighing about 30 pounds each.

The contracting company uses about half hens and half toms for its operation, with recent emphasis going to the value-added products such as smoked turkey, turkey ham, etc., according to John Menges, of New Oxford, representative for Round Hill.

Menges said that Round Hill contracts for 5.5 million birds a year to come from 79 different facilities located in a 12-county area within south central Pennsylvania and northern Maryland.

He said that demand for the whole birds has dropped while the demand for speciality meats has increased, thus the demand for the toms.

The Wengers also raise hen turkeys under contract to Round Hill. At the home farm, Wencrest Farm No.1, the female birds are grown inside a three-story, 300-plus-foot facility.

According to Steve, the hens have a turn around of about 13 weeks with bird weights at about 15 pounds. The hens are used for whole bird sales.

Chore Time was the supplier of the production equipment, including feeders, feed silos, etc.

Richard Eaton, of Salisbury, Md., district manager for Chore-Time, said that the Wenger houses are the longest he's ever outfitted, east of the Mississippi. The next in line for length is a house 910 feet long in Virginia.

The reason for the length of the building comes back to profit margin — it's less expensive to install one long building, thus a reduction in the cost per bird that has to be invested.

Also, Steve said he and his father wanted the long buildings because with a brooder facility for 21,000 birds in each building the growing birds can be moved to the finishing stage with relative ease.

The first shipment of birds is scheduled for this coming week.

First the birds will be kept in the brooder area, which comprises about a quarter of the three-football-field-long buildings. The temperatures have to be controlled and propane heaters are suspended from the ceiling.

The brooder end of one of two 915-foot long turkey raising buildings ends where the people furtherest away stand inspecting the almost completed facility. Along the base of the walls are rodent-prevention concrete barriers. Rows of feeders, waterers and heaters trail back to the end of the brooder section.

When those birds are old enough and large enough, they are moved to the remainder of the long house for finishing out their weight. Ideally, the temperature should be kept cool.

The buildings are basically long pole barns, with the support posts in concrete footers. A 2-foot-high section of concrete stretches along the walls and appears as a footer, but it's really a rodent-prevention device.

Floors are earthen and can be scraped with a skid-loader. The cement rodent wall should also make less likely any damage to the building during cleaning.

Thick gauge chicken wire mesh covers the windows and adjustable horizontal curtains allow for a varying amount of air movement. Fans have been installed also to help move air throughout the building.

Jay Zimmerman, sales representative for Farmer Boy Ag, the company which built and helped designed the facility, said that the building is the longest poultry facility the Myerstown-based swine and poultry systems company has tackled to date.

Zimmerman said that the specific design came as a result of working with all the businesses involved to determine needs and then proceed with a design which the owners accepted.

Right hand near his ever-present walkie talkie, Glenn Wenger considers a question by an open house guest. The walkie talkies keep the Wengers in constant communication, an important safety and efficiency aspect to their operation.

Steve Wenger said the only real changes to the design provided by Farmer Boy Ag and Round Hill were the additions of more automated equipment and a computer.

The wood frame is mostly 2-by-4s and 2-by-8s with some lathing-size strips holding up plastic underroofing. The 6 inches of insulation is blown into the space between the roof and the plastic.

The 60-acre farm where the new buildings are located was recently purchased by the Wengers. Settlement was in March. It had been cash cropped for the last several years and was a dairy farm, before the former owner participated in the federal dairy herd buyout program.

The permits required to put up the facility, under local municipal ordinance, included a stipulation that the Wengers had to submit an acceptable nutrient management plan in order to receive the okay for the building permit.

Altogether, the Wengers farm 600 acres, which is not enough land to adequately sustain continuous application of the cow and bird manure (including compost).

In order to get approval for building permits, Glenn said he had to go to neighboring farmers who have cash cropping operations, and ask them if they would take his manure. Three farmers signed that they would, giving the Wengers the go-ahead for the poultry houses.

Glenn said that he does not have a contingency plan in case something happens to the owners of the farms and he is forced to seek alternative uses for the manure.

(Turn to Page A28)

Between the two long turkey buildings are feed storage bins connected to an auger-pipeline delivery system. The three tanks of propane fuel are used to keep brooder houses at the correct temperature for keeping poults healthy and growing. The window curtains along the side windows allows good, adjustable cross ventilation.

Long Turkey House

He said that since it isn't a problem now and it doesn't look like it should be a problem, he'll deal with it only if it should come up.

For various reasons, tom turkeys have a higher expected mortality than do hens. Hens average up to 4 percent mortality from when they are delivered as chicks until they reach adulthood. Toms average up to 9 percent mortality.

Disposal of dead birds by incineration has been practiced widely but is now being replaced by composting, something reported in the Feb. 8, 1992 edition of Lancaster Farming .

That article and seminars held by the Lancaster County extension office helped the Wengers learn more about the process, Steve said.

They have since constructed on the new farm, a 36-foot, by 24-foot pole building with 5-foot high tongue and groove planking, making six, 6-foot-by-6-foot composting bays under roof. The building sits on a cement slab to prevent nutrients from leaching into and supersaturating the immediate soil.

Armed with a "recipe" for composting dead birds, Steve said that a batch started in March has progressed well.

The compost has been maintaining a temperature of about 150 degrees for several weeks, he said. After the microbes decompose the organic material further, the batch will move further on down the line in the processing until the material is suitable for building up the organic material in the soil.

"Bio-security is the main thing to watch," Glenn said. To date they have had no problems. The new building, as is the matter of course with modern facilities, is to have decontamination foot-baths at each entrance.

The Wengers held the open house prior to the actual completion of the buildings so that people could inspect the facilities and talk with representatives before any birds are brought.

By next week, with an expected shipment of young toms, Glenn said he will not allow unnecessary human traffic in or around the buildings.

The extreme length of the buildings will require some long walking, use of a 4-wheel-ATV, or the pickup truck in handling certain maintenance routines. Problems, if they happen, makes necessary having a vehicle close-by.

Carolyn Pfautz Recalls Year As FFA President

Editor's Note: The Pennsylvania FFA Foundation, assisted by eighteen former FFA state officers, has begun an ambitious search for former state officers - their addresses, what they are doing now, and recording their remembrances as a state officer and their thoughts today about the FFA and what it meant to them to be a state officer. This is the second of a series.

If you know of a former state officer living in your area please either call Mary Jo Cancelmo, Foundation Executive Director (215) 648-0674 or write to the Foundation at Calder Square, P. 0. Box 10493, State College, Pa. 16805.

Carolyn Witmer Pfautz, Garden Spot High School FFA alumna, never realized when a best friend talked her into signing up for the freshman ag science course, that she would someday be in the history books of the Pennsylvania archives. That historical point came in 1983 when Carolyn Wit-

Keep These In Mind When Ensiling

Comments Of The Ensiling Process

In looking at the normal ensiling process, there are a number of related points that should be kept in mind.

12. Temperature. The development of warm silage during the ensiling process is not necessary for the production of quality silage, although so-called "cold storage" with high moisture hay crops may suggest clostridia-type activity. The best temperature for lactobacilli is in the 25-30 degrees C range (75-90 degrees F).

13. Heat Buildup. Air is normally required for any appreciable heating to occur. Heat is the result of plant reapiration and the by-product of microbial activity. If the temperature in an ensiling mass continues to build, a point will be reached (approximately 45 degrees C or 115 degrees F) where serious changes will begin to occur in the protein component of silage. Heating causes a darkening of color or "browning" effect, in which parts of the silage protein (amino acids) are bonded chemically to the soluble sugars, forming a brown, lignin-like material which is indigestible to animals. Thus, heating causes a protein tie-up, thereby lowering the digestibility of the silage. This problem is the greatest in low moisture silages which are less dense and more open to continued air infiltration. The degree of tie-up is dependent on the temperature reached and the length of the heating period. Of course, in addition to this type of loss, the fact that heating occurs means energy (dry matter) is also lost, thereby reducing both the quality and the quantity of the feed.

14. Silo Fires. If the aerobic conditions for a sufficient length of time, the temperature of the ensiling mass will continue to rise to the point where, under certain conditions, spontaneous combustion will occur. This type of problem is most apt to occur with whole-plant silages in the 24-45% moisture content range stored in a non oxygen-limiting environment. Silo fires, although most prevalent in conventional, top-unloading silos, also occur in controlled atmosphere silos which are not maintained properly (i.e. develop air leaks).

15. Silage Additives. Under normal ensiling conditions, there are sufficient numbers of lactobacillus bacteria on the plant material going into the silo to ensure the rapid production of lactic acid environment. However, under some conditions, there may be an advantage in the addition of either selected strains of lactobacillus or enzymes that aid the growth of existing acid producers.

16. Acid Production. The moisture content of ensiling matter plays a large part in the fermentation process. In addition to its direct effect on air exclusion (influences silage density), it also affects acid production. Bacterial activity is lower in low moisture material, resulting in incomplete fermentation (higher pH). This reduces the protection of the silage from spoilage organisms. On the other hand, with high moisture content material, a greater amount of acid is required, since the acid is diluted by the contained water. This may add to the fermentation problem with some plant material such as alfalfa, which already has a low sugar content, so necessary for acid production.

17. Seepage. In the extreme, where silage seepage occurs, this material, although relatively low in nutritional value, still contains the most soluble portion of the plant material. The WSC lost results in a reduced level of readily available sugars for fermentation. Seepage is caused: a) by the pressure of overlay material and b) as a by-product of the initial (acrobic) phase as a result of the collapse of the plant cells once respiration has stopped. The optimum moisture content range for efficient fermentation is 55-65%. Within silo losses (open silos) are the least at the same moisture content range.

18. Proteolysis. One of the actions which occurs during the ensiling of forage is a degradation process called proteolysis. This is a process which results in the conversion of protein present in fresh herbage to various non-protein nitrogen (NPN) constituents. Many NPN compounds are highly water soluble and are poorly utilized in the rumen of cattle. There is extensive absorption of these compounds through the rumen wall and subsequent excretion by the animal. It is highly desirable, from a nutritional standpoint, that protein not be degraded and made water-soluble in the rumen, but pass through to be utilized in the lower intestine. Proteolysis in silage is the result of the activity of plant enzymes called proteases and various micro-organisms. This process becomes quite rapid once the crop is cut. The rate of proteolysis is affected by forage species (higher in legumes), silage moisture content, pH, and temperature (all less at lower values).

Reduction in silage quality because of proteolysis can, to a large degree, be prevented by following good ensiling and silo management principles.

Polish Agricultural Advisors

where 91,000 farmers own about six to eight acres. Although there are several farms with 5,000 to 30,000 layers, these farms are cooperatives owned by the government.

The egg packers used in Poland are similar to those used by Esbenshade, but Wilczak said, "We employ many more people on the cooperative farms because we need administrators and workers for each job." In addition, workers on the cooperatives are provided housing on the grounds.

The Polish guests were impressed that the Esbenshades manage their operation with only one full time and one part-time employee.

The Polish government would like to privatize the cooperative farms because that would be so much more cost effective, but the method to make this transition is difficult because individual farmers do not have the funds to purchase these farms and the equipment needed.

Irwin sees western cooperatives as the solution and has taught extensively on how to create and run a cooperative with farmers buying shares.

The western cooperative concept also is attractive to both Wilczak and Flaga, who are taking a close look at how cooperatives operate in Pennsylvania. The pair toured Bedford Farm Bureau to learn how to to set up a board of directors, sell shares of stock, and other management needed.

"The problem is that the Polish people are skeptical of cooperatives. They are familiar with the unpleasant aspects of eastern cooperatives where the government owns and runs everything," Wilczak said. "It is difficult for the people to grasp the difference between Eastern and Western cooperatives."

Another problem with farmer-owned cooperatives is the lack of finances available to farmers.

Irwin said, "But American farmers did not have money to invest either when co-ops were being established in the 1950s. It was hard to get a farmer to buy a $10 share, but they supported the idea and the concept worked."

Irwin, Wilczak, and Flaga are optimistic that cooperatives will be set up in Poland.

"It's only a matter of time," Irwin said. "It will be easier for them to set them up because they can profit from all our mistakes."

The Polish people are extremely receptive to American ideas.

"We welcome Americans with open arms. We trust American people and respect what we see they have done," Wilczak said.

She was especially impressed with the extensive record-keeping that American farmers keep. While here, she has learned how to set up record-keeping and is eager to teach these skills to Polish farmers.

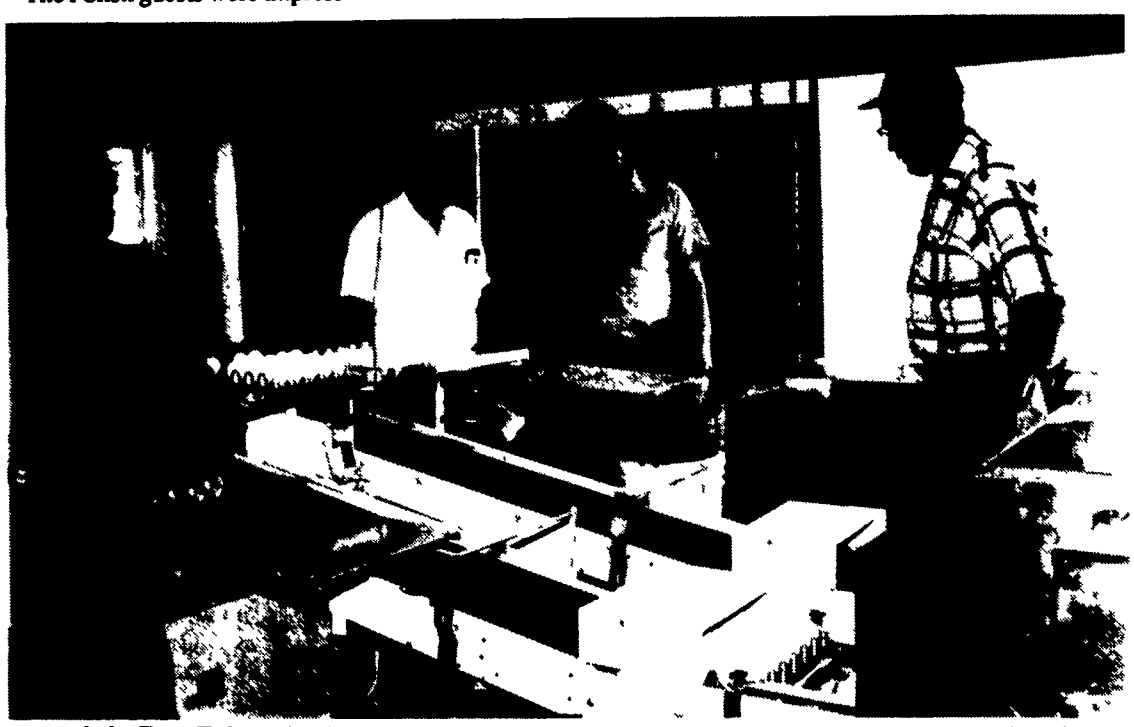
"It will be very beneficial for them to keep a record of weather, spraying, buying, and selling. It will help them plan for the following year," she said.

Poland's weather is conducive to good potato and other vegetable growing. Because Poland grows a large crop of potatoes, they see a joint venture with a potato chip company as an opportunity.

"We like potato chips, but need to have companies to produce them," Wilczak said.

Poland desires that joint venture arrangements be set up by American businesses. The Polish American Enterprise Fund lends money to Poland farmers for 8 to 14 percent interest compared to the 60 percent interest charged by Polish banks.

The Extension work under way in Poland is described by Polish officials as being one of the most successful efforts of any country in the world that is trying to help the country become a free market economy.



J. LeRoy Esbenshade, right, discusses egg production with Polish visitor Jozef Flaga, center, and Jay Irwin, who spent six months in Poland with the Extension service, which assists the former communist-ruled country in making the transition to a free market economy.

Lancaster Bee Keepers To Meet

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Jim Steinhauer, head of the Pennsylvania Bee Inspection Program, is to speak on the new problems of internal and external mites recently introduced into the Americas, during a meeting of the Lancaster County Honey Producers, 6:30 p.m., May 21, at the home of Norman Landis, 1500 Colebrook Rd.

Steinhauer's talk is to start at 7:30 p.m. He is also to field other questions about threats to domestic bee strains, such as the African, or Killer, Bees, which are now in southern Texas, and the effects of the dangerous bee species.

In addition, starting 6:30 p.m., an open hive inspection of honey bees at work is scheduled.

U.S. Judge Dismisses BST Lawsuit

ARLINGTON, Va. — A federal judge has dismissed a lawsuit against the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board (NDPRB). The lawsuit was brought by the Foundation on Economic Trends (FET) and 14 dairy farmers.

The lawsuit contended that USDA and NDPRB were illegally promoting Bovine Somatatropine (BST) with dairy farmer checkoff dollars.

BST is a naturally occurring cow hormone which stimulates milk production. Scientists have developed a recombinant BST for use by producers to increase milk production.

The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) is currently reviewing rBST for efficacy and cow safety. In 1985, FDA ruled that milk from BST test herds is safe for human consumption. Biotechnology opponents, including FET, however, continued to raise questions about milk from BST treated cows and human safety.

In an effort to alleviate growing consumer concerns about milk safety arising from FET's campaign, in 1990 the NDPRB began compiling and disseminating the scientific data with which FDA answered questions regarding milk from BST-treated cows and human safety.

FDA's data and conclusion had been reviewed and endorsed by the National Institutes of Health, the Office of Technology Assessment and the Government Accounting Office.

Additionally, Science and The Journal of the American Medical Association, prestigious science and medical journals, endorsed FDA's methodology and finding.

NDPRB distributed this information to doctors, food store managers, school food service officials, and interested media in order to inform credible third parties about milk safety and avoid adverse consumer reactions towards milk and dairy products.

Lester Evans, a Missouri dairy farmer and chairman of NDPRB, said, "It's gratifying to know that a federal judge views our efforts to protect the pure and wholesome image of milk as in line with our charter.

"NDB's focus has always been on milk's image; not on BST. We did this to protect milk and dairy sales and, thus, dairy farmers' livelihoods," Evans said.

The National Dairy Promotion and Research Board, composed of 36 dairy farmers, develops and administers a coordinated program of promotion, research and nutrition education to strengthen the dairy industry's position in the marketplace.

Board of Education Backs Ag Ed

issued by those reviewing agencies.

Also, there are 171 school districts across the state that have already entered into strategic planning for next year's courses. They need the regulations with which they intend to comply.

The need for including agriculture and agricultural sciences in curriculum has become apparent for many people, because the number of students and adults without any basic agricultural experience or knowledge has grown so great in recent years.

The board approved amending Chapters 3, 5 and 6 of its regulations, but changes to Chapter 5 directly affect agricultural education. Chapter 5 deals with curriculum.

The gist of the amendments to Chapter 5 is to make sure each student receives at least a minimal agricultural education.

On Wednesday, the Commission on Basic Education, an agency of the State Board of Education, met and adopted the amendments which were then fowarded to the full board for consideration Thursday.

The amendments were supported in recent weeks by verbal and written recommendations from the Senate and House agricultural and education committees, and the Independent Regulatory Review Commission (IRRC).

In order for the regulatory amendments to be put into effect, the House and Senate education committees have 20 days for review and approval and the IRRC has 30 days.

In light of the support already given to the revisions, it is likely that they will be approved for publication in the Pennsylvania Bulletin, which would then make them legal.

Specifically, the proposed Chapter 5 amendments would add language to the entry of science as a required topic of study for the intermediate stutdents. Intermediate students are those in grades 4, 5, and 6.

The portion of Chapter 5 dealing with intermediate students requires that eight different subjects which school district must incorporate into their scheduled courses.

Section f under elementary education, states, "Planned courses that provide instruction in the following areas shall be taught to every student every year in the intermediate level program. These planned courses may be taught as separate courses or may be integrated into other appropriate planned courses."

The change proposed here is to add behind the topic "Science" the words, "including where appropriate instruction about agriculture and agricultural science."

At the middle school level, the proposed wording would be, "Science, which involves active learning experiences and which may include laboratory experiments and where appropriate information about agriculture and agricultural science."

Under high school education, the segment concerning science has been expanded to read, "Science, including participation in hands-on experiments and at least one laboratory science chose from life sciences, earth and space sciences, chemical sciences, physical sciences and agricultural sciences."

Other proposed changes to the regulations deal with the establisment of occupational advisory committees, the protection of student anonymity during state and school district assessments of its teaching programs, ensuring parents' rights to have children excused from programs which conflict with their religious beliefs and excused from participating in state assessments, upon receipt by the school district of a written request from the parents.

Robert Lauffer, president of the Pennsylvania Agricultural Teachers Association (PVATA), one of the main lobbying groups for the agricultural changes, said that the proposed changes are welcome and protect the local school district to make choices on courses.

"That kicks it back to the local district and that's where it should be. It should be a local discretionary decision where agriculture can be considered and the school board can decide" how to fulfill the regulatory outlines, he said.

Lauffer, in previous testimony before the Board of Education, had said that the reason agriculture should be included in the regulations, was so that school districts had a choice to use agricultural sciences and incorporate agriculture.

He compared it to going into a restaurant and attempting to order something not specifically offered on the menu.

"Now we are on the menu," he said.

Further, Lauffer said his experiences in attempting to get reasonable change accomplished has been rewarding and educational.

"I am convinced that the system does work," he said, "the process does work as long as what you're advocating does make sense and you are persistent. We were able to have a big impact.

"I told the board today that agriculture and agricultural sciences have now been properly positioned in the curriculum in the overall heading of science.

"Now it becomes the opportunity and challenge for local districts to determine the whole process for addressing agriculture and incorporating it into existing programs."

The apparent next hurdle for the education board will be to address regulations of proposed "learning outcomes," which obstensibly will replace the old system of teach-test-and grade.

Rep. Stairs Proposes Mandatory Ag Education

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculturalists may eventually get the appreciative and educated consumers and neighbors they appear to have lost, if legislation proposed this week goes into effect.

Rep. Jess Stairs, R-Acme, Wednesday introduced legislation into the state House of Representatives that would create the Agricultural Education Act.

The proposal would require the Pennsylvania Department of Education (PDE) to develop and implement agricultural education programs for the general student population, encourage ag education efforts by other groups, and create an agricultural education advisory council to the PDE.

According to Rep. Stairs, the proposal is bipartisan and he already has the support of at least 15 other representatives, of both parties.

Efforts by the Pennsylvania Vocational Agriculture Teachers Association (PVATA) and others to convince the state Board of Education to include agricultural studies into the mainstream curricula resulted in some board action this week which would seem to fit well with the Agriculture Education Act.

The State Board of Education, under the PDE, creates regulations for school districts across the state, outlining minimum requirements for academic achievements.

This year, amidst a radically overhauled set of regulations, most reference to agriculture had been dropped, until Thursday.

Stairs said his proposal results from having talked to people who had been active in attempting to gain the understanding of the Board of Education.

"I had talked to a couple of people in the Pa. Farmers Association and the vocational agriculture teachers and I guess the feeling was there is a need to educate nonfarmers about (agriculture).

"We have, over the years, taken it for granted that people are well versed in production agriculture and with the large nonfarming population, a lot of people are unfortunately unaware of agriculture," Stairs said.

He said that the fact that many people only know that food comes from a grocery store is disappointing, and perhaps a failure of the educational system, which for years took for granted that students understood agriculture.

According to supporters of the legislation, that old assumption may have been an appropriate atti-agriculturalists so they don't know the whole story. I could hope they might expand their research. For example, Jerseys are now the fastest growing breed. Surely, they deserve to be a feature on the ceramics, too.

If another year you would want to consider using prizes which feature the other dairy breeds, I can give you the name of a Jersey breeder/crafter. I've seen her plaques, lapel pins, and pencil sketches. You may want to make an inquiry. Her name is:

Our family enjoys Lancaster Farming and I usually pass along Section B to a person who likes to try the recipes. I would hope the Recipe Contest could in the future broaden the recognition that milk is produced by more than one breed of cow. (The Supreme Champion at the PA Farm Show 1991, 1992 was a Guernsey.)

Editor's Note: We know the cows of color are important to many of our readers. That's why at least two of the prizes are cows of color. Unfortunately, our black and white photo makes everything look "generic." But now that you know, we hope you will reconsider an entry in the contest so you have a chance to win a colorful prize. And if you should be unfortunate enough to win one of the uncolorful items, give it to one of your color blind neighbors who milks Holsteins.

Rep. Stairs Proposes Ag-Ed Act

tude when the majority of students were the children of farmers, or spent part of their childhood farming and working on farms, but now, with school-aged children knowledgable about agriculture being in the vast minority, the students have no opportunity to learn about basic, important aspects of living, such as, what food is and from where it comes.

"That's where I was hoping that we can better educate our citizens," Stairs said.

The proposal would give powers and duties to the secretary of education. It would be his responsibility, with the aid of a 13-member agriculture council, to:

• Conduct a periodic assessment of school-based agricultural education throughout the state.

• Provide assistance, support and resource information to educators and public and private agencies on agricultural education, the existing, but not widely used, "Ag in the Classroom" programs, and to support and maintain an inventory of agricultural education materials, programs and resources available throughout the state and nation.

• Identify, recognize and establish awards for exemplary agricultural science curricula.

• Make sure that schools assess the "learning outcomes" for agricultural education.

("Learning outcomes" is a new phrase being used to mean knowledge which students gain from instruction.)

• Provide grants (under the secretary's discretionary approval) to groups which actually put together and carry out Ag in the Classroom programs, and those which promote agricultural literacy; and also to those programs developed locally by an occupational advisory committee in local school districts.

• Prepare a guidance document, in consultation with the council, for administering the grants.

Also, under the proposal, the secretary of education is to submit an annual report to the governor and the General Assembly which would outline the state's agricultural education programs and achievements. He would also include recommendations for future program needs in the report.

The proposal for a 13-member Advisory Council on Agricultural Education is to create a board chaired by the secretary of education. The other members would include the secretary of agriculture and 11 people appointed by the secretary of education.

The limits on the education secretary's appointments would be that he would have to have three members representing food processing industry; three active, resident commercial farmers; three representatives of the commercial ag marketing industry; one representative of an agricultural college from a state-related university; and one member selected from a list submitted by PVATA.

Under the proposal, the representatives of the various agriculture industries would have to be chosen from a list provided by the Pennsylvania Council of Farm Organizations and the public at large.

There would be no pay for sitting on the council, but actual expenses required would be reimbursed.

The funding for the program is probably the most difficult obstacle, according to Rep. Stairs.

"The only problem, obviously, is that it is a tight year financially and any new programs have to be scrutinized. I hope we don't have too much resistance," he said.

The proposal seeks a one-year allocation of $250,000. The money would be appropriated into the Agricultural Education Fund, which would also be a new and protected source of money for agricultural education.

The Agriculture Education Fund would be a "special, nonlapsing fund in the State Treasury," according to the proposed document.

Also detailed in the proposal, all moneys placed in the fund and interest that accrued would be used specifically for carrying out the intentions and duties specified in the act.

Although just introduced, Al Myers, Pennsylvania Governmental Relations mananger, said, "It's a progressive step in the development of Ag in the Classroom and agricultural education in whole. It's about time that we take these steps. We support it and we think it's a good deal."

Robert Lauffer, president of the PVATA, said, "I've been encouraged by the movement of the State Board of Education with respect to agriculture education, and I see the Ag education bill as a logical complement to the board's action."

Wisconsin Will Host Hereford Show

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Polled Hereford kids and Polled Hereford cattle will be in the spotlight when Wisconsin hosts the 19th Junior National Polled Hereford Show and Forum in Milwaukee, July 13-18.

"You're Among Friends" is the welcome American Polled Hereford Association (APHA) junior members, their families, and friends from all parts of the country will receive when they gather for the year's largest junior breed event that emphasizes education, leadership, competition, and fun.

Highlights, in addition to the cattle show, include a fun rodeo, judging contest, national illustrated speech contest, team marketing, showmanship, Beef Bowl, junior membership meeting, and awards banquet. Wisconsin has also planned an afternoon of choice, allowing participants the chance to tour dairy and veal farms, a cheese factory, the Botanical Domes, make a trip to the water park and zoo, or to try their luck at fishing on Lake Michigan.

More than 400 head of Polled Herefords are expected for the Junior National Show, one of the largest all-junior beef breed shows in the nation. Lining up the cattle in the $8,520 premium event will be lead judge Tom Biglieni of Republic, Mo., and associate judge Ross Carlson of Murdock, Minn. The heifer show is set for Friday, July 17, while the steer, cow-calf, bred-and-owned, and championship divisions are scheduled for Saturday, July 18.

For more information, contact Marilyn Emory or Karen Miller at the American Polled Hereford Association, 11020 N.W. Ambassador Drive, Kansas City, MO 64153-2034, (816) 891-8400.

Recent Price Gain Makes

system.

The gain reflects several underlying factors in the marketplace that bode well for dairymen, including increased sales of cheese and non-fat dry milk powder, according to industry analysts. The strength of national prices will outpace negatives such as an increase in the current government-imposed assessment and possible decreases in local over-order charges, the analysts note.

The 48-cent M-W increase will raise Class I prices by a corresponding amount in June in the region's various federal orders; it will raise Class II and III prices this month. But its larger significance may well be as a sign that farm milk prices are headed for hefty gains during the rest of the year.

Jim Fraher, the economist at Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, is predicting the M-W will climb another $1.50 or so before peaking sometime this fall. If he's right, the $13 peak would be the highest M-W price since the fall of 1990.

At this point, there's little doubt that 1992 will be better than a dismal 1991 was for dairymen. The April increase means that the March M-W price of $10.98 a hundredweight will mark the low point for the year. Last year, the M-W bottomed out at 10.02 a hundredweight.

In its most recent Dairy Situation and Outlook Report, the USDA projected that farm milk prices across the country will average $0.50 to $1 per hundredweight higher this year than last year. Locally, Fraher said, dairymen can expect to realize $1 to $1.25 more despite "downward pressure" on the region's various over-order premiums.

Members of the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board will meet May 22 to consider what to do about the current $1.30 over-order charge it enforces, which is due to expire June 30. Industry sources say they expect the board will continue the premium, although at a lower rate.

Similarly, a state-imposed over-order premium in New Jersey of $1.05 is due to end May 31. This one is not likely to be extended, according to the sources. Various mechanisms will take its place, however, although they may not generate as much money for farmers. For instance, the Middle Atlantic Cooperative Milk Marketing Agency, known as MACMMA, will re-extend its over-order pricing authority into the southern part of New Jersey when the state program expires, Fraher said.

Another negative part of the pricing picture is an increase in the assessment the government imposes as a budget savings measure. The mandatory assessment increased from 11.25 to 13.65 cents per hundredweight May 1 as a result of more than $23 million in refunds from last year's five-cent assessment. By law, the USDA must increase the level of the assessment to compensate for the refunds it pays to farmers who can document they sold less milk in the current year than they did the year before.

The 47,000 farmers who qualified for a refund of their 1991 assessment represented about 30 percent of all dairymen nationwide. Analysts predict that far few farmers will qualify this year as they respond to a more favorable economic climate.

It's not a major factor in production decisions, according to Fraher, who noted that even at 13.65 cents, the assessment still represents just one percent of a producer's total proceeds from selling milk.

Most of the credit for rising prices goes to a buoyant cheese market, according to Fraher. Added sales of nonfat dry milk, particularly through the government-funded Dairy Export Incentive Program, also have helped. On the supply side, production, particularly in the upper Midwest, remains flat. Overall, USDA analysts estimate that 1992 production will match or exceed very slightly the 1991 total.

To Charlie Shaw, head of the Dairy Division at USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, the price gains represent a vindication of the Bush administration's opposition to new legislation to help dairy farmers.

Shaw, speaking in Frederick County, Md., recently, noted that Secretary of Agriculture Edward Madigan has taken a number of steps to aid the industry. These include advance purchases of cheese by the school lunch program and an expansion of the export incentive program, which Shaw termed "very successful."

At the same meeting, Ed Coughlin, a National Milk Producers Federation official, said that butter is the only dark cloud in the present rosy outlook. From October through February, Coughlin noted, roughly four out of every five pounds of butter produced by the industry was sold to the government.

"We have no answer to the butter problem at present," Coughlin said.

Carolyn Pfautz Recalls Year

mer was elected the first female state FFA president.

The 1983-84 state officer tenure brought back many memories for Carolyn. There was a movement in the national ranks of FFA to do away with the National Poultry Judging Contest. The Pennsylvania delegation, headed by Carolyn, made the motion to table that idea for a year until further investigations could be made. The state officer team was instrumental in gaining other states' support, such as Delaware, Ohio, and Virginia, to back up Pennsylvania's motion. As a result the National Poultry Contest is still in tact on the national FFA level.

Carolyn's 83-84 team was diversified but united. One team member, Brandon Weary, chaplain, was "into" heavy metal bands — the team always joked with him about this irony. The team became united in more than one way — Duane Herr, regional vice president, married the sister of Bill McBratney, another regional vice president after meeting her at a summer get together, held at the McBratney's lakeside home. Carolyn herself ended up marrying a 1982-83 state officer, Michael Pfautz, of Ephrata. Some of the other officers have been in each other's weddings. Dave Blank, now an ag teacher at Danville High School, and Ron Martin from Garden Spot High School were in Carolyn and Mike's wedding. Michael's brother, Tim, continued the line of Pfautz state officer tradition by being elected a state officer in 1984-85.

The 1983-84 team did many of their activities under their own direction, due to the fact that the state advisor was quite ill. But Carolyn recalls affectionately the help of Henry Givler, then field consultant for the Lancaster area.

Carolyn Witmer Pfautz

"I used to call him 'grandpa' and I still think fondly of him to this day.

"I have used all the leadership skills that I developed as a state officer and have applied them to what I have done to date." The teamwork ethic needed to function as state officers is one of its best attributes. "I also gained a lot of self-confidence whereas before I had very little. I learned the value of working with other people and gaining the ability to express myself. I developed the ability to think and speak extemporaneously."

After Carolyn's tenure as state president, she worked a couple of years in a bank, training to be a financial services representative. She discovered during her training that she wanted more direct contact with the public.

While chapter president, several of her male officers asked her to cut their hair occasionally. She considered this fact and her natural talent in that area and decided in 1984 to attend beauty school. After working several years as a hair stylist, in 1990 Carolyn opened up her own shop in Ephrata, Alpine Hair Design. "I always tell young people coming in for appointments about the FFA and the effect it had on me getting where I am today... and my profession is not directly related to agriculture in any way. I know sometimes FFA is not perceived as 'cool' but I tell them they have to give it a chance — just one year — and you'll be surprised that it is really not just a 'farming' experience." The personal growth attributed to the FFA curriculum will affect you the rest of your life.

In closing, Carolyn Witmer Pfautz, states "being a state officer was the best year of my life. It was something I could never experience in any other organization." Now a successful business woman in her own right, Carolyn says she will encourage her own children, Sabrina, 3, and Elliott, 9 months, to take advantage of all the opportunities the FFA offers, and of course, to aim to be FFA state officers... in a new century, 2000, and with new horizons to look forward to.

Commodity Boards Accept Nominations

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is seeking board member nominations for several commodity promotion programs.

The commodity programs include sheep and lamb marketing, apple marketing, vegetable marketing/research, peach and nectarine research, and potato research.

The boards have the authority and responsibility to manage commodity promotion programs and to distribute funds.

Nominees must be active in the production of the particular commodity in Pennsylvania.

Those appointed to the boards will serve three-year terms and are expected to attend regular board meetings and participate in other related functions.

The deadline for submitting nominations is May 22 for terms that will begin on July 1. Nominees' names and addresses should be submitted to the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Market Development, 2301 N. Cameron St., Harrisburg, PA 17110.

Beneficial Bug Book From California

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Anyone looking for "good bugs" for their garden or farm is invited to send for a free new booklet available from the Department of Pesticide Regulation (DPR), of the California Environmental Protection Agency.

"You can find out where to buy everything from ladybugs and lacewings to mosquito fish and parasitic nematodes," said DPR Director James W. Wells. "There are controls for many insects, including aphids, mites and beetles, as well as controls for weeds like Scotch broom, Russian thistle, and puncturevine."

The 31-page booklet, which goes by the unwieldy title of "Suppliers of Beneficial Organisms in North America," includes 95 suppliers of more than 126 different organisms used for biological control of pests on small and large farms, and in backyard gardens.

The listing is an updated version of the 1989 edition, Wells said. "We try to revise it every couple of years. Each year, the number of suppliers and the number of beneficial organisms increases. Biological control is a very exciting field — there's a lot of interest in alternatives to pesticides, and a lot of work is going on in this area."

The booklet includes the names, addresses and phone numbers of sources of beneficial organisms throughout the United States and Canada, along with their product line, whether they sell wholesale or retail, and whether they have a catalog or brochure available. Also noted is whether they supply free information and consulting.

"Our booklet doesn't have any information on how to use beneficial organisms," said Wells. "If we did, it would have to be the size of an encyclopedia. You can sometimes get information like that from the supplier."

Wells said that using a beneficial organism to fight pests usually takes a little more knowledge than using a pesticide.

"With a chemical pesticide, you can read the label to know how much to use, when to apply it, how to get best results. And you can usually see the results fairly quickly.

"With natural enemies, it's a little different," Wells continued. "Although the results are more gradual, they are often more long-lasting, since you are establishing a system of natural checks and balances. But to succeed, it is important to know the pest you are dealing with, and the best way to approach it.

"That's why farmers call in integrated pest management (IPM) specialists, who know how to diagnose problems and recommend solutions. Home gardeners can take advantage of the tremendous expertise (through cooperative extension), or ask one of the suppliers in the booklet for advice. Many of them have literature available on the beneficial organisms and how to apply them," said Wells.

The booklet is indexed to help match suppliers with the specific natural enemies they sell. There is also an index of beneficial organisms, with scientific name and target pest.

Not listed are biological controls that are single-celled organisms (microbial pesticides, such as Bacillus thuringiensis), which are considered pesticides under state and federal law and are widely available.

Although several natural enemies for various whiteflies are listed, there is no commercially available "good bug" to fight ash whitefly. A state-sponsored biological control program aimed at ash whitefly will continue this year, with releases of a parasitic wasp that is proving very effective in locations where it has been released in the past.

Free, single copies of the booklet are available from the Department of Pesticide Regulation, Environmental Monitoring and Pest Management Branch, Attn: Beneficial Organisms Booklet, 1220 N Street, P.O. Box 942871, Sacramento 94271-0001. To order by phone, call (916) 654-1141.

Beef Industry Launches Biggest Campaign Ever

CHICAGO, IL. — On May 18, the beef industry will ask America "What's for Dinner?" as it launches a new multi-million dollar advertising and promotion campaign called "Beef. It's What's for Dinner."

The $42 million, 17-month print and broadcast campaign, from Leo Burnett U.S.A./ Chicago, debuts nationally to kick-off summer grilling and family entertaining season.

"'Beef. It's What's for Dinner.' speaks to the increasingly diverse tastes and interests of today's family. These folks love burgers and steaks, but they want to experiment with new recipes, too," says Monica Eorgoff, director of advertising for the Beef Industry Council/Beef Board.

The new creative features contemporary beef recipes that can be prepared in 30 minutes or less — from Steak Diane to Kung Pao Beef — appealing to the convenience-oriented family which enjoys beef as part of a balanced diet.

"Our research tells us that consumers are tired of being told what to eat and what not to eat," says Eorgoff. "The new advertising demonstrates how families can continue enjoying the foods they love — like beef — in moderation. All of the recipes featured throughout the new campaign are convenient, nutritious and taste great."

Launch of the new advertising is being supported by a comprehensive media and promotion campaign.

An extensive print schedule features recipe distribution via popular women's and general interest publications. Television will reach beef consumers across the country with a round-up of contemporary beef recipes set to rousing "appetite appeal" music such as Copland's "Rodeo." Thirty- and 60-second spots will air on primetime, daytime and sports programming.

An impactful promotional campaign includes a cooperative in-store tie-in which Lea & Perrins Steak Sauce, point-of-purchase materials, and local merchandising opportunities.

"It's one of the largest consumer campaigns the beef industry has ever extended to support new advertising and promotion," says Eorgoff.

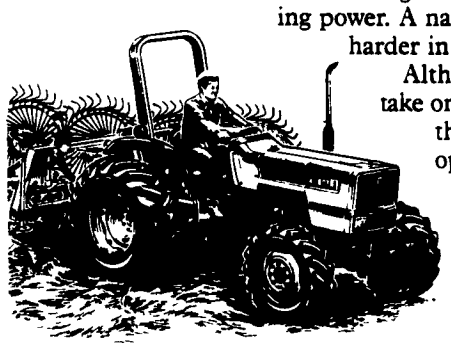
Beef advertising and promotion is a producer-funded program of the Beef Board and the Beef Industry Council of the National Live Stock & Meat Board.

The Beef Industry Council is a federation of 44 state beef councils that conducts promotion, research and consumer information programs on behalf of the beef industry.

HANDLES ANYTHING THAT CROPS UP.

Kubota M-Series farm tractors are built for any kind of work that crops up. And with 4-wheel drive, they easily pull implements you'd expect to find behind a much larger tractor.

These Kubota tractors are built with strong, liquid-cooled diesel engines. With 44-85 PTO horsepower. Optional shuttle-shift transmissions. A turbo-charged model offers increased pulling power. A narrow new version works harder in close quarters.



Although a Kubota is built to take on work, it doesn't come with the big fuel bill or other operating expenses of many larger tractors.

Before you plow, cultivate, spray, load, mow, or bale, take one look at the Kubota M-Series. It handles any work that crops up.

damage during an extended season following the regular antlered and anterless seasons.

"Our evaluation of the hotspot program concludes it has not met the needs of farmers with crop damage," Crooke said.

Earlier this year, PFA proposed rescheduling next season's hotspot hunt to coincide with the regular antlered deer season, but the suggestion was rejected by the Game Commission.

"We believe that if the hotspot season has any chance to work, the best time to implement it would be when there is maximum hunter activity," Crooke testified.

"However," he added, "since the Game Commission does not support this recommendation, we believe that legislative action is again necessary."

Crooke told the task force, "Farmers need legislative relief, and we need it now. We need a program which will allow hunters to help farmers destroy deer for crop damage as the damage is occurring."

In addition, Crooke said, "We believe it is time to consider crop damage compensation for farm losses." Citing a deer damage fund to compensate farmers in Wisconsin, Crooke said, "I would have to believe that the General Assembly... would recognize our state's number one industry at least as much as the state of Wisconsin has (theirs)."

Go Whole Hog At Lehman's Pig Pickin's

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — If you haven't participated in one of Harold Lehman's "Pig Pickin's," you don't know what it means to go "whole hog."

Lehman's "Pig Pickin's" is when whole pigs are roasted and people use tongs to help themselves to the pork.

The meat is drenched in Lehman's "secret ingredient sauce," which according to Lehman's fans, can't be duplicated for its mouth-watering flavor. The tender, succulent pork entices people to pig out during "Pig Pickin's," which are quite popular in Virginia.

Recently, Lehman roasted 11 pigs for the Kraybill Mennonite School Benefit Auction in Mount Joy. Although Lehman generally purchased top hogs that weigh 220 pounds live weight and dress out at 175 pounds for his catered Pig Pickin's, the school pig roast was a bit different because White Oak Mills donated the 11 hogs and other school patrons provided baked potatoes, baked beans, rolls and cake to accompany it. Since Lehman has a $3800 chopper, he made the coleslaw for the event.

Although Lehman lives in Virginia, this is the third year he roasted hogs for the Mount Joy school, which some of his relatives attend.

It is Lehman's 12th year in the business of pig roasting that has expanded to include chicken, beef, seafood feasts, and full-meal catering services.

Lehman grew up on a dairy farm in Chesapeake, Va., where it is a 25-year family tradition to roast a pig for a family gathering every Thanksgiving season.

About 12 years ago, friends started asking Lehman and his wife Sally to roast a pig for them on special occasions.

Lehman, who is employed as an aircraft emergency repair investigator, now has a barbeque business that keeps him and his family busy roasting every weekend from May through November.

Last Friday, while Lehman was at Mount Joy roasting pigs in nine cookers, his wife was supervising a pig roast with three cookers in their home state. Lehman had to rush home to help with two pig roasts slated for Saturday.

The Lehmans incorporated their business eight years ago when they bought a license, insurance, and 12 cookers. The children Ron, 23; Ray, 27; and Cindy, 16, also help in the family business.

A popular entree for wedding receptions is 80-pound beef sides roasted, which Lehman and his assistants, dressed in white suits and hats, carve for guests.

For the past nine years the Lehmans also cater the Virginia Billfish Tournament and the Tide water Amateur that draws crowds of 800 plus people. These dinners, called Steamship Rounds, include an all-you-can-eat seafood feast of oysters, scallops wrapped in bacon, shrimp, trout, and flounder.

A typical catered meal in addition to the roasted meat includes cole slaw, red skin potato salad, baked beans, rolls, fresh fruit salad, and iced tea.

"We provide the food, service, paper products — everything but the table," Lehman said.

For the pig roast, Lehman lights the charcoal the night before the event and roasts the pig during the night.

Lehman said that his secret sauce was developed by an elderly gentleman who had been making it for 50 years. Four years ago, the 86-year-old gentleman sold the secret recipe to Lehman, who uses 450 gallons of it a year in his business in addition to selling gallons of it for individual orders.

"Many people have tried to duplicate it, but no one ever got close," Lehman said. Before he purchased the recipe, he had experiemented with numerous other recipes but was never pleased with them.

"When I got the recipe, I was surprised by what's in it," he said. "I never even came close in trying to figure it out."

In addition to using the sauce for pig roasts, Lehman marinates the chicken in the sauce for 24 hours before grilling the chicken.

"I never had a lawsuit. We have had commercial liability for 10 years and never had a claim filed," Lehman said. "My wife and I are very particular."

It takes eight hours to clean up after a pig roast. At their Virginia home, they have a commercial commissary. In Mount Joy, a high pressure wash truck was used to clean the equipment.

"The best thing about barbecuing is meeting all the fine people," Lehman said. "There isn't too much that I don't like except missing all the major holidays. I'd like to spend just one Fourth of July with my wife and I alone."

The Lehmans are active members of the Mt. Pleasant Mennonite Church where they provide special dinners four times a year.

"Part of our belief is caring for people and serving the Lord. This (barbecuing) is the capacity God led us into and we like to do it for the church. Taking time to donate our talents for others puts things in perspective."

The Lehmans reserve Sunday as a day of rest and do not schedule barbecues for that day. Lehman said, "We do use Sunday as a rain date for barbecues scheduled on Saturday, but in all our years of business, we never had to use a Sunday as a rain date."

His father Jake, who is now 81, was born in Elizabethtown. When he was nine months old, his parents moved to Virginia.

"I still say that I'm a Pennsylvanian," Jake said. "This is where my people live."

Jake continues to live on the same Virginia dairy farm since 1912. His son, Jake Jr., has taken over management of the 100-cow herd.

"He has a cow that milks 20 gallons a day — the only cow in Virginia to milk that much on a two-times a day milking schedule," the older Lehman said.

Jake likes to continue to help with barbecuing and with farming. "It's a good combination," he said.

Lehman's Barbeque Inc. may be contacted at 1443 Fenteress Airfield, Chesapeake, Va. 23322 or call (804) 482-4091.

Jim and Faye Ting, left, eagerly await a chance to "pig out" at the pig roast prepared by Jake, center, and Harold Lehman.

HOW TO MICROWAVE SAFELY

The popularity of microwave cooking continues to grow. Almost every American home possesses at least one oven. However, concerns about the safety of cooking meat and poultry products in the microwave persist. Even the cookware and plastic wraps used in the ovens have come under question.

In addition, there are traits, unique to microwave cooking, that affect how completely food is cooked. "Cold spots" can occur because of the irregular way the microwaves enter the oven and are absorbed by the food.

Since we have traditionally relied on thorough cooking to kill bacteria that may be present in food, we should take simple, yet effective steps to ensure even cooking when using a microwave.

If you have a microwave, carefully read the following tips on how to microwave safely.

DEFROSTING

* When using the microwave to defrost foods, plan to finish the cooking immediately. Some areas of larger food items may begin to cook during the defrost cycle, raising the temperature to a point where bacteria can flourish.

* Remove food from store wrap prior to thawing. Foam insulated trays and plastic wraps are not heat stable at high temperatures. They can melt or warp from the food's heat, possible causing chemicals to migrate into the food.

* Do not defrost or hold food at room temperature for more than two hours. It is easy to forget all about a food item thawing in the microwave oven. Set a timer to sound an alert when the thawing time is complete.

COOKING

* Have large pieces of meat deboned. Bone can shield the meat around it from thorough cooking.

* Arrange food items uniformly in a covered dish, and add a little liquid. Under the cover, steam helps kill bacteria and ensure uniform heating. Either plastic wrap or a glass cover works well. Many recipes suggest venting a small area, allowing some steam to escape. Plastic wrap should not touch the food.

* Cook large pieces of meat at 50% power for longer periods of time. This allows the heat to reach deeper portions without overcooking outer areas. Commercial oven cooking bags can also help even out cooking and provide a tender product.

* Move the food inside the dish several times during cooking. Stir soups and stews. If you do not have a turntable, turn the entire dish during cooking. This is especially important for foods like casseroles that cannot be stirred.

* Do not cook whole, stuffed poultry in the microwave. The bones and density of the bird do not allow even cooking. Microwaves may not thoroughly cook the moist stuffing deep inside the bird either.

* Never partially cook food. If planning to combine microwave cooking with conventional roasting, broiling or grilling, transfer the microwaved foods to conventional heat immediately.

* Use a temperature probe or meat themmometer to verify the food has reached a safe temperature. Check the temperature in several places, avoiding fat and bone. It should reach 160 degrees F. for red meat and 180 degrees for poultry.

* Observe the standing time given in the recipe. It is necessary to complete the cooking process.

Ball Players Join Promotion

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Jay Bell, the Pittsburgh Pirates shortstop, will again be serving as a spokesperson for Pennsylvania's dairy farmers. Bell joined the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program's promotion efforts in 1991, and will continue throughout the 1992 baseball season to promote milk and dairy products to consumers and sports fans.

A major portion of Bell's involvement will be on the Pittsburgh Pirates Radio Network. Bell has created two advertisements, titled "Jay Bell Cliches" and "More Cliches." These catchy advertisements focus on Bell's hard hitting baseball experience and his continued need for milk.

As an addition to Bell's efforts, a limited number of the 1991 Jay Bell Growth Charts are available from the dairy farmers. Children interested in receiving a growth chart should prepare a story about why kids need to drink their milk and how milk helps Jay Bell play his game. These stories should be handwritten and one page or less. All entries should be sent to "Growth Chart Offer," the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program, 2301 N. Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110. Offer applies while supplies last. Further information is available by calling (717) 787-6903.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Fresh. Delicate. Peaceful. And green. Above all, green.

The "green" of May makes it almost my favorite month — or at least a tie for tops with October. In fact, the month's loveliness suggests that the time of creation might have looked a lot like May in Pennsylvania, when everything is fresh, dewy - and green.

And yet, the green isn't all green. ("Make sense, Mom!" the youngest would be quick to instruct). But it isn't.

Some of the "green" is yellow, and some is chartreuse, and some has a grayish-blue tint. Some of the "green" is even a soft shade of red. The hickories green up in one hue, the oaks in another and the locusts in yet another. Swamp maples and willows and walnuts each add their own shadings to May's green color chart.

A couple of lawn mowings have evened the grass clumps of earlier spring to a neater expanse of green, while the perennial borders begin to fill and stretch to define the boundaries of the yard. Root systems work overtime to poke and push new blades of grass, erasing the remains of last summer's drought-enhanced bare spots and worn patchs.

Dense stands of cattail spikes have risen from the blackened stubble of old bullrushes burned from the pond banks. And, residue of flowers past, dried stems and stalks, disappear into the lush growth of weeds awakening to the seasonal challenge of trying to out-do more legitimate, cultivated foliage.

Chickweed thrives in the blessed dampness of this springtime. Maple seedlings with seemingly foot-long roots entangle themselves around the feet of the climbing roses. And, with gloved hands, I yank away portions of a persistent infestation of poision ivy on the border fence, its presence tattled on by still-tiny leaflets of three in the bright maroon shade of early growth.

But if May is the month of green, it is likewise a month of striking color contrasts.

All that green enhances the pink and rose and white of flowering trees, cherry and apple and peach and the myriad of ornamentals covering themselves with blossoms. Yellow chips of daffodils are replaced by the bold, bright red of tulips, to give way later to stately iris hoisting pastel blooms high above sword-like foliage.

And lavendar duels for attention with the green in plump, grape-like clusters of fragrant, old-fashioned lilacs. Dainty sweet violets color whole sections of the woodlot floor, with a few of the yellow dog's-tooth type scattered around for variety.

Newly painted cornfields lay exposed and temporarily barren, devoid of greenery in the brief interim between tillage and sprouting. Passage of the planter leaves a wake of pin-striped row markings, and the planted strips of corn resemble lengths of brown corduroy stretching between the contrasting velvety-green of mature alfalfa stands.

May's unsettled weather offers its own contrasts. We dig out shorts to wear while setting out early tomato plants on a sun-splashed, 90-degree afternoon. By the following evening, the woodstove is re-kindled, row covers go over the strawberries for frost protection, and the tomato plants win temporary shelter under inverted plastic ice cream containers.

And the front that wrought such dramatic change swept in cold rain, which hit the sun-warmed soil and sent wispy clouds of fog drifting across the meadow - but only from the plowed fields. An eerie effect jarring a May afternoon.

Even the cows seem to heartily enjoy May. Pasture grass is lush, long, tender and grows quickly. Both sunshine and breezes are reasonably moderate. No snow. No flies. Our matronly milkers almost dance to the meadow, then sprawl out on the grass like vacationers soaking up sun on a sandy beach.

Maybe we could re-do the calendar - and tuck in a few more May pages.

Food Label Alert

If you are an avid label reader because of health concerns you may be noticing that many of the new "FAT FREE" versions of products come with an increased sodium level. Check the sodium level differences between the regular version, the light version and the fat-free version. If you are shopping for someone with high blood pressure who is sodium sensitive, you may want to think about which version is really best. Probably the best compromise is the lower sodium level.

The good news is that more food producers are including nutrition labeling on products. They are getting ready for the changes in labeling requirements due next year. There are many new lowered fat and lowered sodium products. There are increasing numbers of no-salt packed vegetables and they are available at the same price as regular salt added vegetables at some supermarkets. If the no-salt versions are still in the diet food section and cost much more where you shop, shop around. Good health does not need to cost you much more.

Remember to compare serving size when you are comparing two products. At the present time, serving sizes are not standarized and they vary considerably. Compare the stated package serving size with what you normally eat. Some cereal box servings are ¼ cup. Do you know anyone who eats ¼ cup cereal for breakfast? The new label regulations will standardize servings.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

We have been busy since we returned from our 10-day trip south to Georgia and Virginia. While we were gone the weeds really grew in our peas and strawberries. We also discovered that a number of plants had arrived, during our absence, and needed to be planted. One big problem was where to plant the lilac, forsythia, flowering quince, and rhododendron bushes that we'd ordered.

But, thoughts still linger from the trip. Our two children in Atlanta live eight miles apart and so we drove back and forth quite a bit. One day, when my husband and son were doing wood working, I asked for some hand sewing. Well, I was given some jeans to patch on the sewing machine. I was unaccustomed to the machine but managed to put four patches on two pair of pants.

We had seafood kabobs for an evening meal and another day we had lasagna outside on a large deck. They fed us too well but we enjoyed it. One afternoon we played miniature golf and I was not the winner.

Another afternoon we took a nature hike through Fernwood Forest with our 11-year-old grandson reading the forest trail map and leading us. Many trees and plants had signs telling us their proper names. Afterward, we saw a wonderful show of asteroids in the nearby planetarium. In the evening we saw our five-year-old grandson play soccer.

The last weekend was spent with our son and his family in Virginia. He manages the largest egg processing plant in that state and he showed us houses with more than 100,000 chickens in each one. The three grandchildren had Easter vacation and so we spent a day in Maymont Park near the heart of Richmond. This 100-acre park contained a Children's Farm and also black bears, elk, and bobcats. The Italian and Japanese gardens were lovely and as the weather was fine we had a picnic on the grounds. It was a long but pleasant trip.

Lancaster Farming's Dairy Recipe Contest

Lancaster Farming celebrates June Dairy Month by offering cow-mania prizes for your favorite recipe using at least one dairy product such as butter, milk, cream, cheese, yogurt, or ice cream. It may be a recipe for a main dish, dessert, salad, beverage, snack, bread, soup, appetizer, or whatever you desire.

To enter the drawing, send only one recipe with your name, complete address, and phone number. Please include several paragraphs about your farm, family, interests, or other tidbits of information. Although it is not required, we especially appreciate receiving a picture of you or your family with your entry.

Even if you won a prize in a previous contest, you are eligible to enter again. And, if you did not win before, make sure you enter — this may be your year.

Send your recipe (one per family) immediately. Your entry must be postmarked by May 30 to be eligible for the drawing.

Prizes include a canister set with a farm scene, a photo album with a cloth-cow designed cover, 4 place mats with cows, a bread plate, sugar and creamer, salt and pepper shakers, a teapot with silk flower arrangement, a cow door hanging, 2 cow mugs, two step stools with cow pictures, a cow picture, a barn knicknack shelf with dairy-related items, and a painted beeswax cow.

Send your entry to Lou Ann Good, Lancaster Farming Dairy Drawing, P.O. Box 609, Ephrata, PA 17522.

Discover Rice

All rice is not created equal — some is long, some is short, some is flavored, and some is frozen — but all are nutritious, delicious, and can fit into any family's meal.

Long grain rice remains separate when cooked. Cooked medium and short grain rice are more moist, tender, and cling together more than long grain.

Regular-milled white rice takes only 15 minutes to cook on top of the range, and because of its enrichment, it is similar in nutritional value to brown rice.

Parboiled rice, which cooks in 25 minutes, has undergone a special process that makes the cooked grains extra fluffy and separate.

Brown rice's tan color comes from the natural bran layers left on the grain. This form of rice has a nutty flavor and a slightly chewy texture. It takes about 45 minutes to cook.

Precooked rice is the fastest-cooking rice of all. Completely cooked and dehydrated, precooked white rice takes only about 5 minutes to prepare while precooked brown rice requires about 10 to 15 minutes.

Rice, a non-allergenic food, is ideal for most allergy diets.

An 18-month study recently revealed that substances within rice bran oil have cholesterol reducing properties. The oil, which occurs naturally in rice bran, has components that researchers think not only inhibits cholesterol absorption but also decreases the production of cholesterol by the liver.

A collection of recipes developed by the USA Rice Council, especially for today's health-conscious lifestyles, demonstrates how remarkable rice combines with other foods for breakfast, lunch, and dinner. The cookbook Light, Lean, and Low-fat has nearly 100 recipes that are low-fat and easy to prepare. To receive a copy, send your name and complete address with $2.50 to USA Rice Council, P.O. Box 740121, Houston, Texas 77274.

EASY PORK FRIED RICE

1½ tablespoons vegetable oil; divided
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup diced fully cooked ham
1 cup finely chopped fresh mushrooms
½ cup thinly sliced green onions
3 cups cooked brown rice, chilled
1 tablespoon reduced-sodium soy sauce

Heat ½ tablespoon oil over medium heat in large skillet. Add eggs and cook without stirring until set. Invert skillet over baking sheet to remove cooked eggs; cut in strips. Set aside. In same skillet, heat remaining 1 tablespoon oil over medium high heat. Stir fry ham, mushrooms, and onions in oil about 3 minutes or until mushrooms and onions are tender. Stir in cooked rice and reserved egg strips; sprinkle with soy sauce. Toss lightly; heat thoroughly. Serves 4.

SUMMER FRUIT SALAD

2 cups cooked rice, cooled to room temperature
½ cup quartered strawberries
½ cup grape halves
½ cup quartered kiwifruit slices
½ cup pineapple tidbits
½ cup banana slices
¼ cup pineapple juice
2 tablespoons plain yogurt
1 tablespoon honey
Lettuce leaves

Combine rice and fruits in large bowl. Blend pineapple juice, yogurt, and honey in small bowl; pour over rice mixture. Toss lightly. Serve on lettuce leaves. Serves 4.

LEMON CHICKEN AND RICE

1 pound boneless chicken breast chunks
Salt, ground black pepper, and paprika
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 cup uncooked rice
½ teapsoon dried oregano
½ teaspoon grated lemon peel
1¾ cups chicken broth
Juice of one lemon
Snipped fresh parsley for garnish

Season chicken with salt, pepper, and paprika. Brown chicken in oil in large non-stick skillet over high heat. Add remaining ingredients except parsley; bring to a boil. Reduce heat, cover, and simmer 20 to 25 minutes, or until rice is tender and liquid is absorbed. Fluff with fork. Garnish with parsley. Serves 4.

Entry forms are now available for the annual crab cake cook-off sponsored by the University of Delaware Sea Grant College Program and Graduate College of Marine Studies. The competition is expanding this year to include a preliminary cook-off at the Delaware State Fair, July 27 (Senior Citizen Day), in Harrington.

At the preliminary cook-off, all registered entrants will concoct their best crab cakes for a panel of judges who will choose six blue-ribbon finalists. Those finalists will be eligible to compete for cash prizes (first place is $125) and the title of "Delmarva's Best Crab Cakes" at Coast Day, October 4, in Lewes.

Coast Day is the college's annual educational festival and showcase for Delaware's rich marine resources. The event, now in its 16th year, attracts about 10,000 visitors to the Marine Studies Complex in Lewes each October and has won national awards for its efforts to promote marine resource education and stewardship.

Each contestant will receive one pound of blue crab meat to use the day of the competition. All other ingredients and cooking utensils are the contestants' responsibility. Judging will be based on originality, predominance of crab meat, taste, and texture.

Entries are due July 1. For a complete set of contest rules and an entry form, or for more information, contact the Delaware Sea Grant Marine Advisory Service at (302) 645-4346.

JUST LIKE A CRAB
Leon Silicki, Wilmington, DE

A crab has both white and dark meat. In order to make a crab cake, both should be used. In this recipe, the dark (claw) is used to protect the white (backfin) from becoming dried out and greasy, just as a crab uses his claws to protect his body from predators. The spicy covering gives a good contrast to the succulent and moist inside, while not taking away the taste of the crab. The claw mixture works well to keep the backfin together without using filler and also adds a nice golden brown covering that is 66% crab meat.

Mixture I:

2 pounds jumbo lump crab meat
½ stick butter
½ small green bell pepper, finely chopped
½ small red bell pepper, finely chopped
¼ Spanish onion, finely chopped
2 medium stalks celery, finely chopped
⅓ cup finely chopped fresh parsley
2 egg whites
¼ cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon cayenne
⅓ teaspoon black pepper (medium grind)
2 tablespoons white Worcestershire sauce

Mixture II:

1 pound claw crab meat
2 large eggs
1 heaping tablespoon mayonnaise
1 tablespoon Old Bay seasoning
Cayenne, to taste
1½ tablespoons white Worcestershire sauce
½ cup Saltine cracker crumbs (fine)

1 quart vegetable oil for frying

Empty 2 pounds of lump crab meat into large mixing bowl. Pick out 14 lumps and put in refrigerator to use for garnish later. In 1 quart saucepan, melt butter and add next 4 ingredients. Saute over medium heat for 6 minutes. Add parsley and saute 1 more minute. Take off burner and let cool 5 minutes. In small mixing bowl, add the rest of the ingredients, except for cracker crumbs. Whisk thoroughly till blended well. Pour the mixture from the saucepan over the crab meat. Mix gently so as to leave meat in lumps. Next do the same with mixture in bowl. Mix in cracker crumbs at very end. In a second large bowl, mix in all ingredients except for the cracker crumbs. Mix thoroughly. Don't worry about leaving claw meat in lumps. Add in cracker crumbs and mix thoroughly again. On a sheet of wax paper, divide first mixture into 14 cakes ¾ -inch thick.

Again, on wax paper, divide second mixture in 14 parts. Now divide the second mixture in half. Flatten each to about ½ inch thick. Place first mixture on top of one and place the other on top of it. Form into cake 1" thick. Second mixture should touch on both sides to encapsulate first mixture.

Heat 1 quart vegetable oil to 350° in 10" skillet. Place in 5 crabcakes and cook 5-6 minutes till golden brown. Turn once after 3 minutes. Drain on paper towel and garnish with one of the jumbo lumps on top and 2 sprigs of parsley.

"Microwave Magic"

By:
Carol Stark

Although local strawberries will not be available for a couple of weeks, grocery stores and markets have featured shipped berries since March. And the wonderful aspect of this is... we can enjoy this delicious fruit for longer periods of time as opposed to a few short weeks at the start of the summer. Although the shipped varieties aren't as sweet as locally grown, they can be used successfully in many recipes and are more desirable than frozen. Strawberry desserts are featured in this week's microwave minutes.

Tart Shells

6 tablespoons margarine
1 cup all purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 to 3 tablespoons cold water

Cut margarine into flour and salt until particles are the size of small peas. Sprinkle water, 1 tablespoon at a time, tossing with fork until all flour is moistened and pastry almost cleans side of bowl. Gather pastry into a ball. Roll into 13 inch circle about 1/8 inch thick. Cut circle into six 4½ inch rounds. Shape pastry rounds over backs of six custard cups, making pleats so pastry will fit closely. Prick thoroughly with fork to prevent puffing. (Make lots of pricks). Arrange custard cups in circle on 12 inch plate. Microwave uncovered on HIGH for 3 minutes; rotating plate 1/2 turn. Microwave until tart shells are dry and flaky, about 2 minutes longer. Let stand 5 minutes. Loosen edge of each tart with tip of knife; carefully remove each tart shell from cup. Let cool on rack.

NOTE: To cut circles easily cut around a 10 ounce custard cup. The diameter measures about 4½ inches.

Now we are ready to make a custard base pudding for the tarts.

Custard

4 eggs
⅓ cup sugar
Dash of salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
Dash of nutmeg

Pour milk into 4 cup measure. Microwave uncovered on HIGH for 4 minutes.

Beat eggs, sugar, salt and vanilla in 1½ quart bowl. Gradually stir in hot milk. Pour into bowl and sprinkle with nutmeg. Cover loosely and microwave on MEDIUM heat (50 percent) until edges begin to set, 5 to 8 minutes. Turn bowl and microwave on MEDIUM LOW (30 percent) until knife inserted in 3 or 4 places comes out clean 5 to 7 minutes longer. Cover and refrigerate 3 hours.

When ready to serve, fill tart shells with custard. Slice fresh strawberries on top of custard in a decorative manner and top with a dab of whipped topping.

Rhubarb With Strawberries

4 cups 1 inch rhubarb or about 1 pound
¾ to 1 cup sugar
¼ cup water
1 cup halved, fresh strawberries

Mix rhubarb, sugar and water in 2 quart casserole. Cover tightly and microwave on high (100 percent) 5 minutes; stir. Cover and microwave until rhubarb is tender and slightly transparent, 3 to 5 minutes longer. Stir in strawberries.

Strawberries Hawaiian

1 pkg. (10 oz.) frozen sliced strawberries
½ cup red currant jelly
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons rum or syrup from canned pineapple

In 1½ qt. casserole place berries. Microwave at HIGH for 2½ to 3½ minutes, until defrosted. Mash with spoon. Add jelly. Cover. Microwave at HIGH 4 minutes or until boiling. Mix cornstarch with rum or syrup. Add to hot strawberries. Stir well. Cover. Microwave at HIGH 2 minutes more, until thick. Makes about 1½ cups of sauce for ice cream

Fresh Strawberry Jam

4½ cups crushed fresh strawberries (wash and stem before crushing).
1 box (1¾ oz.) powdered fruit pectin
7 cups of sugar

In a 3 quart casserole place berries and pectin. Stir well. Cover. Microwave at HIGH 8 to 10 minutes until mixture is at a full rolling boil. Add sugar to boiling mixture and stir well. (Microwave at HIGH 8 to 10 minutes, uncovered, stirring after 5 minutes, until mixture reaches a full rolling boil. Then, time for 1 minute of boiling. Skim off foam with metal spoon, stirring jam about 5 minutes before ladling into prepared glasses. Seal. Makes about 8 cups.

Twin Berry Shrub

Shrubs are old-fashioned sparkling punches made with berry juice and carbonated beverage.
20 ounces of strawberries frozen
2 packages (10 oz. each) frozen raspberries in pouch
1 can (6 oz.) frozen lemonade concentrate
2 quart club soda, well chilled

Place berries in microwave. Microwave at HIGH 12 to 14 minutes. When berries have completely thawed, sieve to remove all seeds.

In a small glass bowl place lemonade. Microwave at HIGH 1 to 2 minutes. Add to the sieved berry syrup. Chill.

Just before serving, blend berry juice mixture with club soda in festive glasses or in punch bowl. Decorate with lemon slices if desired. Makes about 3 quarts.

Fluffy Strawberry Marshmallow Pie

Crumb pie shell
1 package (10 oz.) large marshmallows
½ cup milk
1 cup whipping cream, whipped

In a 3 quart casserole place marshmallows and milk. Cover. Microwave at HIGH 2 to 3 minutes, until mixture can be stirred smooth. Chill in refrigerator about 30 to 40 minutes until thickened, stirring occasionally. Fold in whipped cream and strawberries. Pour into crust and decorate with reserved crumbs or additional whipped cream. Refrigerate several hours or over night.

Crumb Pie Shell

¼ cup butter
1¼ cups fine cookie crumbs (vanilla wafer, graham cracker, chocolate wafer, gingersnaps.
2 tablespoons sugar

In 9 inch pie plate place butter. Microwave at HIGH ½ minute, until melted. Blend in crumbs and sugar. If desired, reserved 2 tablespoons crumb mixture for garnish. Press firmly and evenly into 9 inch pie plate. Microwave at HIGH 2 to 2½ minutes, rotating dish ½ turn after 1 minute. Makes 1 (9 inch) crumb shell.

ANSWER — Anne Arnold of Middlesex requested cookie recipes made from cake mixes. Here are several from Jane Ray, Williamsburg, and A.M. Peifer, Manheim.

Cookie Variations

2 packages 2-layer-size of yellow cake mix (pudding type)
⅔ cup butter, melted
2 eggs
2 cups miniature semi-sweet chocolate pieces

In the large mixing bowl, combine cake mix, butter, eggs, and ¼ cup water; mix well. (Dough will be stiff). Stir in chocolate pieces. Drop by rounded spoonful onto an ungreased cookie sheet. Bake at 375 degrees for 8 to 10 minutes or until golden brown. Cool 2 minutes on cookie sheet. Remove; cool on a wire rack. Makes about 7 dozen.

Peanutty Chocolate Cookies: Prepare recipe as above, except use chocolate cake mix and stir in 2 cups candy-coated milk chocolate covered peanuts, halved.

Carrot-Raisin Cookies: Prepare recipe as above, except use carrot spice cake mix and stir in 2 cups raisins. Bake at 375 degrees about 12 minutes.

Lemon-Apricot Cookies: Prepare recipe as above, except use lemon cake mix and stir in 2 cups snipped dried apricots.

Lemon Whippersnaps

1 18½ -ounce package lemon cake mix
2 cups frozen whipped cream, thawed
1 egg
½ cup sifted confectioners' sugar

Grease cookie sheets. Combine cake mix, whipped cream, and 1 egg in a large bowl. Stir until well mixed. Drop by teaspoon into confectioners' sugar; roll to coat. Place 1½ inches apart on a cookie sheet.

Bake at 350 degrees for 10 to 15 minutes or until lightly browned. Remove from cookie sheet; cool. Makes 4 dozen cookies.

You may add nuts, raisins, chocolate bits or dates or coconut for a different flavor.

ANSWER — A Chambersburg reader requested a recipe to make soft pretzels that taste like Aunt Annie's soft pretzels. Thanks to Sue King, McKeesrocks, for sending a recipe.

Soft Pretzels

1 package dry yeast
⅛ cup warm water
1⅓ cups warm water
⅓ cup brown sugar
5 cups flour
Baking soda
Water
Coarse salt

Preheat oven to 475 degrees. Dissolve yeast in ⅛ cup warm water. Stir in 1⅓ cups warm water, brown sugar, and flour. Beat until smooth. Knead until elastic and let rest about 5 minutes.

In a saucepan, measure 2 tablespoons baking soda for each cup of water used. Use enough water to fill saucepan. Boil baking soda and water. Divide dough into 36 equal parts or into fist-sized pieces. Roll dough to form rope. Twist pretzel. Place twisted pretzel in water for 15 seconds until pretzel dough is golden or yellow in color. Remove pretzel from boiling water and place on salted cookie sheet. Salt top of pretzel with coarse salt. Place cookie sheet with pretzels into oven and bake for 8 to 10 minutes or until pretzel is golden brown.

Rice

HARVEST RICE

1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 cup thinly sliced carrots
1 cup sliced green onions
2 cups cored and chopped unpeeled apples
3 cups cooked brown rice
½ cup seedless raisins
1 tablespoon sesame seed
½ teaspoon salt

Cook carrots in oil in large skillet over medium-high heat until tender crisp. Add onions and apples; cook 3 to 5 minutes. Stir in onions, rice, raisins, sesame seeds, and salt. Cook, stirring, until thoroughly heated. Serves 6.

CHEESE RICE RING

1½ cups boiled rice
1 beaten egg
2 tablespoons melted butter
¼ cup milk
½ cup shredded sharp cheese
¼ teaspoon grated onion
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
3 tablespoons chopped parsley

Preheat oven 350 degrees. Grease a 7-inch ring mold. Combine all ingredients. Fill it with rice mixture. Bake mold while set in a pan of hot water about 45 minutes.

MINI BRAN MEAT LOAVES

Vegetable cooking spray
1½ pounds lean ground beef
1¼ cups rice bran
1 cup finely chopped onions
½ cup diced red peppers
½ cup snipped parsley
½ cup dry bread crumbs
½ cup picante sauce
2 egg whites, lightly beaten
1 teaspoon lemon pepper
1 teaspoon seasoned salt
Picante sauce or catsup, optional

Coat eight 4x2-inch mini-loaf pans with cooking spray. Combine all ingredients in large bowl; mix well. Divide mixture into pans. Bake at 350 degrees 30 to 35 minutes. Serve with picante sauce or catsup, if desired.

To cook meat loaf in an 8x4-inch loaf pan, proceed as directed and bake at 350 degrees 55 to 60 minutes.

COUNTRY BREAKFAST CEREAL

1 cup uncooked brown rice
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon butter
½ cup seedless raisins or chopped prunes
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
2¼ cups water
Milk or cream, optional
Honey or brown sugar, optional
Fresh fruit, optional

Combine rice, salt, butter, raisins, and cinnamon with water in 2- to 3-quart saucepan. Bring to a boil; stir once or twice. Reduce heat, cover, and simmer 45 to 55 minutes, or until rice is tender and liquid is absorbed. Fluff with fork. Serve with milk or cream, honey or brown sugar, and fresh fruit, if desired. Serves 6.

BLACK BEAN AND RICE SALAD

2 cups cooked rice, cooled to room temperature
1 cup cooked black beans
1 medium fresh tomato, seeded and chopped
½ cup shredded Cheddar cheese, optional
1 tablespoon snipped fresh parsley
¼ cup prepared light Italian dressing
1 tablespoon lime juice
Lettuce leaves

Combine rice, beans, tomato, cheese, and parsley in large bowl. Pour dressing and lime juice over rice mixture; toss lightly. Serve on lettuce leaves. Serves 4.

RICE VEGETABLE SOUFFLE

1 cup cooked rice
¾ cup cooked green beans
¾ cup cooked carrots
2 tablespoons minced parsley
1 teaspoon grated onion
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 eggs, beaten
1 cup milk
3 tablespoons melted butter

Cook rice in salt water and drain. Chop cooked vegetables and mix with rice. Season with salt, pepper, parsley, and onion juice. Beat eggs and milk. Mix with other ingredients. Place in a greased baking dish and pour melted butter over top. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 to 45 minutes. Serves 6.

Cook's Question

QUESTION — Mrs. Paul Mast, Morgantown, would like to know how to keep Red Beet Jelly from tasting sugary. She said that she made the jelly the same as other years, but this past year, it was sugary. She tried re-heating it in the microwave and although the jelly was smooth for a few days, it again got sugary. She writes: We love the jelly when it's smooth. Here is the recipe that she uses.

Red Beet Jelly

3 cups beet juice
4 cups sugar
1 package Sure Jell
6 ounces black raspberry Jell-O

Bring juices to a rolling boil. Add the Jell-O and the pectin. Boil 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and add the sugar. Stir well and pour into jars.

ANSWER — Barbara Nagy requested a recipe for Black Diamond Steaks. Thanks to Rita Bradley, Chambersburg, for sending a recipe.

Black Diamond Steaks

Marinade:
1 cup oil
1 cup red wine
½ teaspoon oregano
¼ teaspoon basil
1 clove garlic, crushed
4 - 6 venison steaks

Blend all marinade ingredients in blender or food processor. Cover steaks with marinade and refrigerate. Turn twice a day for 4 to 6 days. Cook, grill, broil, or fry according to desired method.

ANSWER — Cynthia Anton, Morgantown, requests a recipe for deviled ham that tastes like the Underwood brand. Thanks to Mary Watkins of Clarksburg, Md., for sending a recipe. She checked 15 cookbooks to find this recipe.

Deviled Ham Spread

2 cups cut-up cooked ham
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
Pinch cayenne pepper and mace
Radishes for garnish

Grind the ham. Add seasonings; taste and increase the seasonings if desired. Pack into a mold and chill. Before serving, turn onto a plate and serve as a spread for hot popovers. Add garnish. Makes 1½ cups.

Leave Grass Clippings On Lawn

HUNTINGDON (Huntingdon Co.) — Leaving grass clippings on the lawn will not harm your turf — in fact, it may be beneficial, says a Penn State turfgrass expert.

Recycling grass clippings not only is civic-minded, but it's also beneficial to the lawn and saves the work involved in bagging. "If you leave the clippings on the lawn, you can reduce fertilizer needs by as much as 33 percent. Clippings break down easily, returning nitrogen and other nutrients to the soil.

Some people are concerned that returning clippings to the lawn may result in thatch accumulation," but because the clippings decompose rapidly, they do not contribute to thatch."

For clippings to break down rapidly, the lawn must be mowed frequently enough so that large amounts of leaf residue don't remain on the surface of the turf. Weekly mowing often isn't frequent enough, especially during the peak period of leaf growth in spring.

When you're mowing, you shouldn't take off more than one-third of the leaf blade at one time. Otherwise, you may scalp the grass and make it more vulnerable to stress.

If no herbicides have been applied to the grass, homeowners can rake the clippings and use them as mulch around trees, shrubs or flowers.

Lawn mower manufacturers now offer mulching mowers that keep the clippings circulating under the mower deck, chopping the grass blades into finer pieces. This hastens the decomposition of the clippings and reduces the amount of residue left on the lawn, however, you don't have to buy a mulching mower to recycle clippings. Ordinary lawn mowers also will provide good results.

Hey! Folks

If your cows are slipping and falling, it ain't my fault because I have a machine called a Scabbler that will fix that concrete so your cows won't keep slipping all the time.

We've got service all around this section of the country, and I have a fellow just jumping to do your job mighty fast.

And that ain't all, our prices are right reasonable, and if you're a tightwad we'll let you do the job yourself if you've got over 500 square feet. It can save you right smart a money.

So call me on my nickel at 800-692-0123. If I'm not by the phone, some real live person will take your number, and I'll try to get back to you real soon. Usually somebody is awake in this outfit, so you just call any time day or night. But, please mind the Lord, and don't call on Sunday.

Just one more thing. We fellows make our living doing this kind of work, and we've got children to feed and bills. That's our side of it, but you've got such things too. A lot of people tell us that this Scabbling saves a whole lot more than it costs. So go ahead and do it. It'll put shoes on everybody's feet.

Schooltime Fun For Second Graders On Farm Tour

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEWTOWN SQUARE (Delaware Co.) — The students in Mrs. Linda Muhoney's and Mrs. Ellen Alexander's Scenic Hills second grade class got a "mouth-opening experience" last week.

That's when they took a field trip to the Garrett Williamson Farm on Bishop Hollow Road as part of their food production class.

They looked inside a ram lamb's mouth and tried to guess exactly how old the animal was.

"What's happening to your teeth?" asked Delaware Extension Director and County 4-H Agent C.R. "Bud" Bryan to the group of about 10 second-graders.

Some just stopped petting the lamb for a second, smiled, and raised their hands. One girl answered, "They fall out."

Bryan asked her, "And what do you call the teeth that you had to begin with?"

"Baby teeth," said a boy, laughing.

"And what do you call the teeth that you get?"

Together, many of the students said, "Permanent teeth!"

Bryan told them that, yes, sheep also lose their baby teeth, much like humans. Their mouth grows and adult teeth replace the starter teeth.

Bryan asked them to guess the age of the sheep by the teeth it has. Two teeth are lost per year, over a total of about four years. "If you look in the sheep's mouth and it had six adult teeth and two left on the ends, how old would the sheep be?"

One girl spoke up quickly, and said, "Eight!" But that's not right, according to Bryan. The 4-H agent asked them to do a little adding on their own — if it had six adult teeth, that's three times two, which makes six.

"Three," said a boy.

Bud Bryan, 4-H agent, and Leslie Ruzowicz, 4-H staffer, show second graders what to look at to determine the age of sheep.

Photos by Andy Andrews

"That's correct," said Bryan, smiling.

Jim Short, 4-H aide, and Leslie Ruzowicz, part-time 4-H staffer, were on hand to offer the demonstrations.

Linda Muhoney, second grade teacher at Scenic Hills (part of the Springfield, Delaware County school system), said the field trip was part of the culminating experience for the students.

The children also visited other exhibits on the 240-acre farm, including the embryology project (housed in the old maternity section of the former dairy barn).

A lot like the Ag In the Classroom Project, the 4-H Food Production Education Program, run by the extension, provides an opportunity for the students to learn the fundamentals of animal agriculture. Through the 4-H office, local schools can sign up with the program and tour the farm during April, May, or June.

The program is aimed at grades two and higher. It allows students to learn how food is produced, the variety of different foods, relationship of agriculture to each person, and to practice healthy eating using all four food groups.

Groups tour the facility. Last week, the farm housed an Ayrshire dairy heifer, two Angus (a cow/calf pair and heifer), one Yorkshire cross sow with a litter, and various sheep and poultry.

During the summer, 40 kids will take care of 18 pigs and 10 or more market lambs. But taking care of many of the animals will be shared by a great deal of the more than 5,000 active 4-H members.

In addition, the barn is undergoing some changes so 4-H members can practice showing farm animals.

Teachers interested in signing up for the food education program can contact Bryan at the Delware County Extension Office, 1521 North Providence Road, Media, PA 19063, (215) 565-9070.

A cow and her calf stay shy and aloof from Mrs. Alexander's second grade class.

"Man, she's cute," says a Scenic Hills second grade student while he pets "Casey," a 2-year-old Ayrshire at the Williamson Farm. James Short, 4-H program aide, looks on.

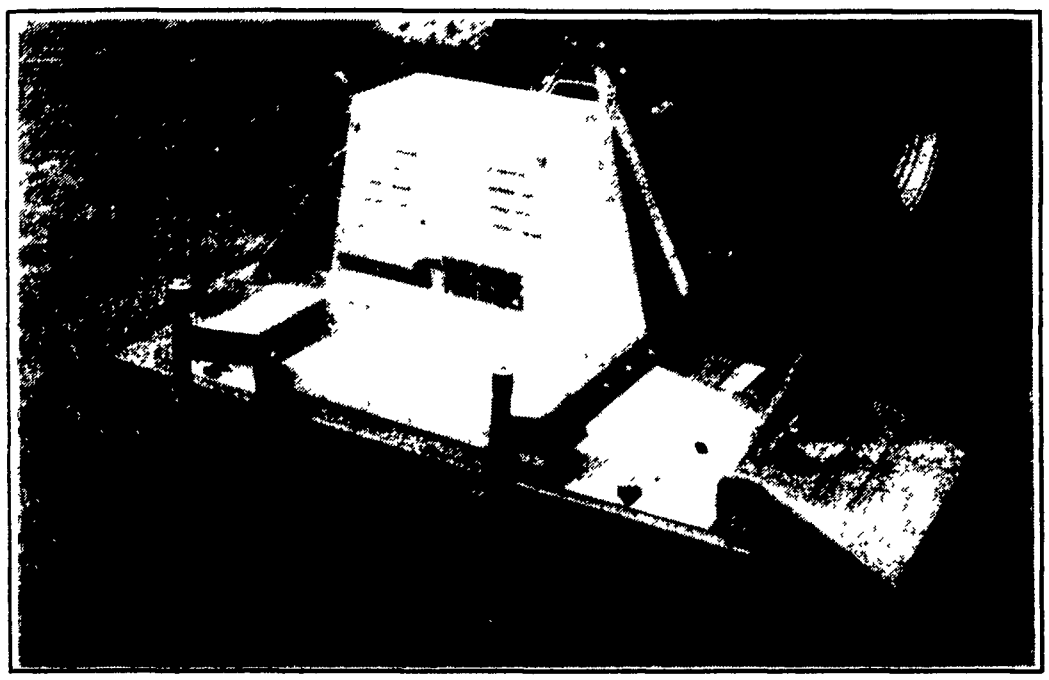
Woods new generation of rearmount mowers for the '90s

The standards for rearmount mowers were set in 1971 when Woods introduced them....Now for the '90s we've redefined the cutting edge with our new line of Woods rearmount grooming mowers.



Model 360 single V-belt drive, mows a 5 ft. width

Woods reputation for trouble-free performance has been earned with features like... heavy-duty gearboxes, designed and manufactured by Woods... Single V-belt drive with automatic belt tension take up... industrial quality blade spindles with lubricated tapered roller bearings... high velocity side discharge deck design... "high-lift" blades... easy-on, easy-off 3-point hook-up. All these features and more guarantee that clean, even, well groomed look every time you mow so you spend more time enjoying your lawn and less time caring for it.

Now Woods new rearmount mowers for the '90's involve the exchange of 20 years of engineering, manufacturing and marketing experience into exceptional quality, dependability and service at a very competitive price.

If your tractor is in the 16 to 35 horsepower range, there's a new Woods rearmount lawn mower for you.

Dairy Promoters Crowned At Berks County Pageant

Connie Leinbach
Berks Co. Correspondent

LEESPORT (Berks County) — Performing an unusual presentation with a space-age theme, Sandra Gross, 16, of Hamburg R.D. 1, was named the Berks County Dairy Princess for 1992 during ceremonies Saturday in the Berks Agriculture Center.

She is the daughter of David and Marilyn Gross and is a junior at Tulpehocken High School.

Geared toward children, the presentation pointed out how astronauts as well as everyone else needs to drink milk every day to ensure good health.

Inside a large box with NASA on the door was an old-world wizard who, in her monologue, tried to counter all Sandra's assertions.

As a dairy ambassador assisting outgoing dairy princess Kelly Gelsinger, Sandra is also treasurer of the Tulpehocken FFA and is president of the Northern Berks 4-H Dairy Club. She enjoys singing in the church choir and school chorus. She also is active with her church youth group at Mohrsville Church of the Brethren.

Sandy is on the dairy bowl team, Holstein bowl, and is a member of the Junior Holstein Club.

She also helps with farm chores on her family's 350-acre farm where they milk 50 Holsteins. Sandra is interested in studying child psychology when she attends college.

Rebecca A. Riegel, 18, a daughter of Bruce and Florence Riegel, was named alternate dairy princess as was Sarah M. Johnson, 18, daughter of Gerard and Jean Johnson of Limekiln.

Both alternates attend Pennsylvania State University where Sarah studies agriculture economics and Rebecca studies horticulture.

Four-year-old Katie Hartman, daughter of Beth and David Hartman of Scattered Acres Farm in Bernville, was named the 1992 Li'l Miss Dairy Princess. She enjoys feeding her family's Holstein calves, planting flowers, and riding her bike.

The other dairy princess contestants were Tracey Lynn Borkey, 18, of Bernville R.D. 1, and Carrie Lynn Hetrick, 16, of Oley R.D. 2.

The other Li'l Miss contestants were Lauren Cochran, 4, daughter of Paula and Kevin Cochran of Womelsdorf; Kate Kocher, 6, daughter of Jean and Ernest Kocher of Birdsboro; Rosie Lyn Moyer, 6, daughter of Lucinda and Paul Moyer of Bernville; Megan Phillips, 4, daughter of Brenda and Jim Phillips of Bernville; and Jennifer Rassler, 4, daughter of Robin and Bryal Rassler of Kempton.

Casey Allen, the morning disc jockey for WIOV-FM, was the mistress of ceremonies.

Judges were Ginny Altenderfer of Kutztown; Carol Dreisbach, information director American Jersey Cattle Association and a former Berks County Dairy Princess; and Dieter Krieg, editor of Farmshine.

In a tearful farewell, Gelsinger described how much she enjoyed being the dairy princess and how she got lost frequently driving to her many engagements.

Rachel Hartman, 6, outgoing Li'l Miss, sang a farewell song to the tune of "So Long, Farewell" from "The Sound of Music."

Berks County Li'l Miss Dairy Princess contestants chat with Casey Allen, WIOV-FM disc jockey, who was mistress of ceremonies.

Berks County Holds Spring Awareness Day For 250

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — About 250 women attended the Berks County Cooperative Extension Spring Awareness Day, May 5, that focused on meeting the challenges of the world's families.

Topics addressed included healthy attitudes, telemarketing fraud, lifestyles of African families, and flower arranging.

The annual event held at the Berks County Ag Center in Leesport also awarded scholarships to two students pursuing a degree in fashion merchandising. The students, Maureen Dundas, Southampton, and Katherine Ritz, Stonetown, are students at Albright College in Reading.

Attitude affects health

Dr. Leo Frangipane, a surgeon, told partipants at the workshop that when he became intested in how attitudes affect healing, he contacted six women who outlived their diagnosis for cancer. He believes four things are needed for people to be happy and do well: Faith in God, faith in the doctor and people attending them, faith in treatment, and faith in self.

Out of his concern and love for patients entrusted in his care, Frangipane organized a support group called SEEK (support, encouragement, exceptional, kinship) where patients learn exceptional attitudes in defying the odds as they battle their illnesses.

"The worst things in life are seeds for the best," Frangipane said. "God permits things to happen because there is something better in it. We can learn from them. Cancer teaches the urgency of life.

"Everybody is going to die sometime. You can dig a hole and hide or you can say, 'I may get breast cancer, but I'm not going to worry about it.' About 99.9 percent of life is tragedy free, but we walk around like it's the opposite," he said.

Frangipane teaches the need for simplifying, forgiving, and living moment by moment so that healing can occur.

Telemarketing frauds

Deputy Attorney General Michael Butler, who oversees five counties, warned the audience about telemarketing fraud and other con games in contests, sweepstakes, charities, and investment scams. He reported that consumers lose $3 billion a year to telemarketing fraud.

One of the most common ploys is the telemarketing scheme that claims substantial prizes have been won by the householder. To claim the prize, householders are asked to give credit card or check account numbers.

"Never give them your credit card number and expiration date or your check account number," Butler said. "Although that is not a tough concept, many people succumb to the high pressure sales. The information is then used to charge things to the householder's account. Seldom are prizes awarded."

Multi-level sales and networking should be examined thoroughly before participating in them according to Butler. "Although many of them are legitimate, if you sell distributorships instead of products, it becomes an illegal pyramid scheme," he said.

Bouquet ideas

Marjorie Shiner, owner of The Nosegay in Bernville, shared an abundance of ideas for combining herbs, flowers, and foliage with antiques or other unique household containers.

"I prefer to arrange things in bunches and stick to one color tone," Shiner said.

Using bunches of asparagus, parsley, lavender, mint tea, and thyme, she arranged them in a basket.

"Combining interesting textures are more pleasing to the eye," Shiner said.

She often uses sprigs of azaleas and other flowering bushes and trees in arrangements. Bare twigs also lend height and interest to arrangements.

When preparing an arrangement, Shiner suggested that persons walk around their yard and garden and look for unusual objects to include in the arrangement. "Flowers do not need to be perfect," she said. "A bent leaf or irregular flower can add interest."

She showed the simplicity that can be achieved by arranging purple tulips in a red-painted basket. She added radish leaves, spray asters, and birch sticks as accents.

Shiner interspersed helpful hints for do-it-yourselfers while she arranged flowers.

When using clear crystal containers, Shiner suggests crumbling deflated foil balloons and inserting Oasis inside the foil so that the silver side of the foil is turned outward. This hides unsightly stems and adds a silvery shimmer to the glass container.

Flower containers that become discolored may be cleaned by using denture cleaner or white vinegar.

If roses drop their heads, they may be revived by placing the rose in a deep container filled with hot water. Shiner explained that a rose with a drooping head is often fresh, but air pockets form in the stem and travel upwards. Because the stem connecting the rose is so slender at the neck, the air pocket becomes lodged at that point and causes the head to droop. By placing the rose in hot water, it forces the air bubble through the head and the head will then stand upright.

To make flowers from your garden last longer, use flower preservative in the water. The preservative may be purchased at flower shops and garden centers.

Flowers from your garden last longer if they are cut in the morning. Always carry a bucket of water with you to place the flowers into it. Roses should be cut under water to prevent air pockets from forming in the stems.

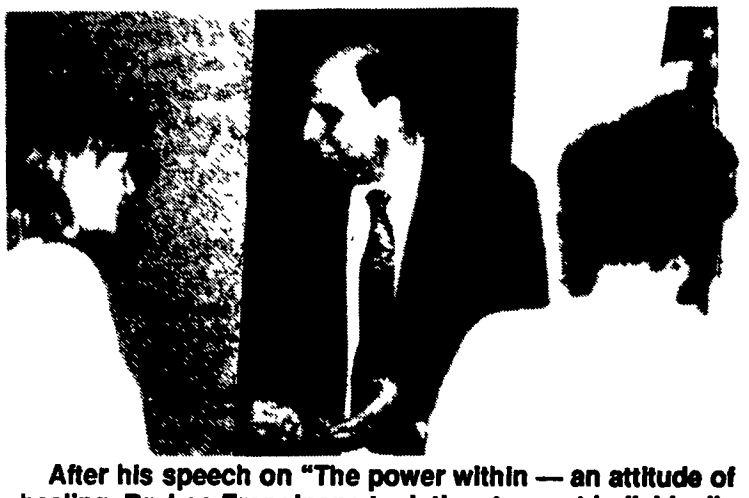
Condition cut flowers by placing them in the refrigerator for two hours before arranging in room temperature water.

African families

Mae Hostetter, extension agent from Dauphin County, reported on her visit to Africa during a study tour coordinated by the National 4-H Council and 4-H Youth Exchange Association. Hostetter said that 80 percent of the work is done by women who arise at 4:45 a.m. and work until sundown. The life expectancy of women is 50 years, and 2 out of 5 children do not live to enter first grade.

Members of the Family Living Advisory Committee who were honored for their term of service in planning programs included, from left: Beth Hartman, Carol Reed, and Dale Schwoyer. On right, Fay B. Strickler, Extension home economist, congratulates the members who served from 1986 to 1992.

This year's recipients of the Berks County Extension Homemaker's scholarships are Maureen Dundas, center, and Katherine Ritz. Elaine Mauchline, chairperson of the committee, presented plaques and $350 checks to the scholarship winners who are enrolled in fashion design at Albright College.



After his speech on "The power within — an attitude of healing, Dr. Leo Frangipane took time to meet individually with those who had questions.

Marjorie Shiner, owner of The Nosegay in Bernville, showed how to incorporate vegetables and herbs in flower arranging.

A popular decorating idea is arranging flowers on a sticky Oasis that adheres to mirrors, candlestick holders, and other usual places.

After you enjoy a fresh arrangement, hang the flowers upside down in a dry, dark place until air dried. In this arrangement, hydrangea, larkspur, and clover shows how preserved flowers can be arranged for long-lasting pleasure.

Kutztown Folk Festival Prepares For 9-Day Celebration

Kutztown (Berks Co.) — Kutztown folks are busy preparing for this summer's 43rd annual Folk Festival, scheduled for Saturday, June 27 through Sunday, July 5. Craftsmen are busy creating their works of art; quilters are trying to finish that last quilt before the deadline; churches and civic organizations are organizing volunteers to prepare and serve much of the delicious food that is available at the Festival.

This summer, visitors will find some new additions to the old-favorite activities. At the red barn, four times a day, children may dress up in costumes and participate in the barnyard play. Also new this year, Mammy and Pappy Snickerdoodle will entertain visitors with their humorous routines and antics.

On the main stage, Ann Burrows, quilt building supervisor, will host a new program about current trends in quilt-making. Jane Strinsmen will host a new show which will feature some of the talented musicians who are also craftsmen on the festival grounds.

Of course, no Folk Festival would be complete without the quilt display and the quilting demonstration. Ann Burrows says she is taking particular care this year to be sure that all the Festival's quilts are American-made. "Our quilts may cost more, but they are made locally and that is important." The same is true for all the craft items on display and for sale.

Glenn Eckert and his Hayseeds will provide the music, while Lester Miller will call the "squares" for his hoedowning and jigging groups on the Hoedown Stage. Each afternoon on the hour, visitors may watch and then participate in some toe-tapping fun. Everyone should "give it a whirl" once.

To obtain a brochure and map of the festival call (800) 447-9269 or write to Kutztown Folk Festival; 461 Vine Lane; Kutztown, Pa. 19530. We will send a brochure with activities listed and a map of the Festival Grounds.

Each year for 43 years, Kutztown Folk Festival draws thousands of visitors to its nine-day observance of colonial crafts, foods, entertainment, and reinactments.

USDA To Conduct Maple Sugar Survey

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)— Leaders of the maple syrup industry requested the WSDA-National Agricultural Statistics Service to conduct a survey which would provide unbiased and statistically reliable data for the industry to plan for continued reinstatement of the maple syrup estimation program.

Maple producers in the 11 major producing states (CT, ME, MA, MI, NH, NY, OH, PA, VT, and WI) will be contacted twice each year. In Pennsylvania, the surveys will be conducted by the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service. Production information will be collected in the late spring following the sap run. Price and disposition data will be gathered in the fall. The combined responses will provide maple syrup producers and industry ieaders with answers to the following questions:

1) How much is being produced?
2) How much can be produced?
3) What is the value of production?
4) What is its potential?
5) What is the industry structure?

All information provided by a maple syrup producer is confidential and will be used only to produce state, regional, and national statiestics. Survey results are available to producers, at their request, as an aid in managing their operation. Production estimates will be published in the June Crop Production report and the price and disposition estimates will be released in the November Crop Production report.

For more information on the maple syrup survey please contact Heather Shuey, at the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service. 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17109; or phone (717) 787-3904.

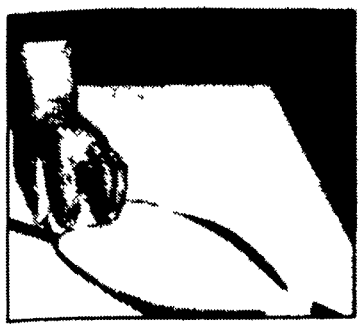
Fillet Fantastic

For both the sportsman and cook, it pays to fillet your own fish. Now see how easy it is. Remember, the knife should be held as parallel to the cutting board as possible — and the sharper the knife, the safer and easier it is to fillet. For a flat fish, flounder, or fluke, a long, thin blade is preferable. You need not flounder at the cutting board, for proper filleting is no fluke.



1. With a very sharp filleting knife, make a diagonal crosscut from behind the soft belly area to behind the head.

2. Insert the knife blade in the fish and slide it toward the tail along the ridge of the backbone. Then, in a sawing motion, work the knife blade from the backbone to the outer fin section, i.e., closer to the cutter. This action will free one-half of the fillet.

3. Then expose the backbone and cut toward the opposite fin section along the length of the fish.

4. This frees the whole fillet. NOTE: These steps should be repeated for the other side of the fish.

5, 6, 7. To skin the fillet, cut through the meat about 1½ inches from the tail end, taking care to stop at the skin. Hold the meat firmly behind the cut. With a sawing motion, with the blade at about a 35-degree angle, the knife is worked away from the cutter.

How To Shuck A Clam With Ease

Introduction. The key to opening a hard clam, Mercenaria mercenaria, easily is to chill it thoroughly in order to shock it into muscle relaxation. This can be done by putting the clams in the freezer for about forty-five minutes, immersing them in a mixture of ice, salt, and water for about one hour, or by storing them in crushed ice indefinitely. For cleaner preparation and serving, clams should be washed or scrubbed. There are four market sizes of clams: chowders are the largest, followed by cherrystones, top necks, and little necks. To open, clams, a sturdy-bladed knife, not overly sharp nor more than four inches in length, is necessary.

1. Grasp clam firmly in hollow of hand, with the indentation of the shell in the direction of the thumb. Place the knife blade between the halves of the shell. Hold the back of the knife blade firmly in the middle of the fingers. Squeeze the hand and the knife will enter.

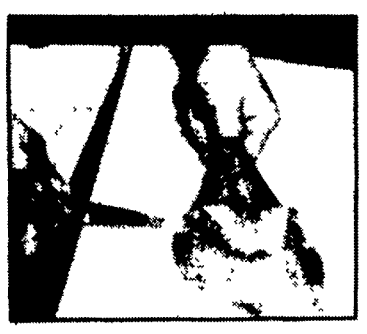
2. With the blade in place, sever one of the adductor muscles, then twist the handle until the shell pops.

3. Move the blade around the inside of the top shell and sever the other muscle. The top shell can then be easily removed.

4. Run the blade under the clam meat to separate it from the bottom shell.

NOTE: The clam can be dipped in cocktail sauce or "slurped" right out of the shell. Appropriate condiments can be used according to individual tastes — lemon juice, a drop of Tabasco, or horseradish and catsup.

Atlantic City Steamed Clams. Place 100 Top Necks in a very large pot. Add 8 oz. Water. Over the top of the clams generously sprinkle fresh parsley, crushed red pepper, and some salt. Then pour olive oil over all to soak the top layer well. Steam until open. Try the broth, too!



Throughout the skinning procedure, the skin can be moved from side to side and the meat can be folded forward to facilitate separation.

Make Lemonade If Life Gives Lemons

SCRANTON (Lackawanna Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension of Lackawanna and Wyoming Counties is sponsoring an educational program on Thursday, May 14, from 9:45 a.m.- 2:00 p.m. at Allied Services in Scranton. The event, "If Life's A Lemon, Make Lemon "aid", is open to the public. Reservations are $9, which includes a hot buffet lunch.

The program will feature Dr. Barbara Davis, associate professor in the College of Agricultural Sciences at Penn State University. Dr. Davis will present a program, "Leaving The Cocoon To Fly Like A Butterfly" which discusses how to cope with loss and ways to overcome it. Maryrita Stuckart, director of volunteer services at the Voluntary Action Center, will discuss the benefits of helping others in her presentation, "Volunteering: Everybody Wins!" Also, Joe Dobbs and Ruth Judd from the Scranton Public Theater will perform "I'm Herbert" and "It's A Sin To Tell A Lie," two short sketches about keeping the kid in you while growing older.

For more information or to make reservation, call the Penn State Cooperative Extension office at (717) 963-6842 by May 4.

Holland Lop Named Tops In Berks County 4-H Rabbit Show

CONNIE LEINBACH
Berks Co. Correspondent

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — It took 10 years of 4-H participation, but Todd Becker, 16, of Norristown, Montgomery County, finally won a contest Saturday during the Berks County 4-H Wabbit and Cavy Lovers Club youth show here in the 4-H Community Center.

Todd's black rabbit, a senior buck in the four class whom he named "Luke" on the spot, won over 300 other rabbits entered in the show.

"It was the biggest show we've ever had as far as animals and exhibitors were concerned," said Nancy Plushanski, coordinator of the event. This youth open show attracted contestants from all over the state and New Jersey, she said.

It also attracted 40 Guinea pigs, or cavies, as they are known in the business.

In the six class, a Palomino, owned by Tammy Brooks of Palmyra, Lebanon County, won top honors. This rabbit also was the runner-up best-of-show.

The best cavy was a Silkie, owned by Christine Cascioli of Egg Harbor, N.J.

In the meat pen competition, the best were a trio of Champagnes, owned by Cheryl Lutz of Spring City.

Californian- Tammy Stroup, Richfield; opposite, Nathan Kramer, Bernville.

Champagne — Rudy Ziegler, Spring City; opposite, Sarah Westley, Hamburg.

Creme D'argent — bestand opposite Jennifer Miller, Limerick.

Giant Chinchilla — Kevin Vosburgh, Port Norris, N.J.

Dutch — Allen Schaeffer, Lenhartsville; opposite, Fawn Long, Egg Harbor, N.J.

Penn State Offers Conservation Leadership Schools

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — This summer, 130 Pennsylvania teen-agers will learn about geology 200 feet underground in a limestone cave, study forest management principles by conducting a forest inventory and gain experience in citizen action by participating in a simulated public hearing.

They will attend Penn State's Conservation Leadership Schools (CLS). Held at the 700-acre Stone Valley Recreation Area in Huntingdon County, these two-week-long outdoor, residential workshops are open to 15- to 18-year-olds interested in exploring solutions to environmental issues. Students must have completed at least one ninth-grade science class.

"This is no recreational summer camp," says Geroge Vahoviak, CLS co-director and an instructor in agricultural and extension education in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "Our students have fun, but they come here to learn."

The curriculum includes basic ecology, land-use planning, environmental risk assessment, watershed and forest management and citizen action. "Much of the instruction takes place in the field," Vahoviak says. "Our students learn about natural resource management by conducting tests and using the results to develop management plans."

Students work in groups of six to eight each, under the guidance of CLS instructors. The instructors have degrees and experience in forestry, wildlife management, biology, energy systems management, environmental interpretation and other disciplines. Instructors include representatives of the Pennsylvania Fish Commission, the Pennsylvania Game Commission and Penn State faculty.

The $265 tuition covers everything but transportation to and from the school. "We try to keep the program as inexpensive as possible so that it's accessible to all students," Vahoviak says. "Many students are sponsored by local organizations such as sporting clubs, conservation districts and environmental groups."

Living accommodations include four-person platform tents with cots, heated shower and restroom facilities, meals and all educational supplies.

Regular sessions will be held June 28 to July 11 and July 12 to 25. An advanced session, open only to students who previously attended a regular session, will be held July 30 to August 8.

Penn State will accept applications for the Conservation Leadership Schools until June 1. For more information write to Conservation Leadership Schools, 102 Wagner Building, University Park, PA 16802 or call (814) 865-3443.

The Conservation Leadership Schools are a continuing education service of the College of Health and Human Development, in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Education and the Pennsylvania Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs, Inc.

Plans Underway For Bradford County Dairy Princess Festival

WYSOX (Bradford Co.) — The Wysox Chamber of Commerce will be the host for the Dairy Princess Festival to be held June 13. The theme for the festival this year is "Treat Yourself To Some Country - Drink Milk". There will be a parade starting at noon.

Activities planned include a petting zoo, ice cream eating contest, a milking contest, cow pie bingo, and a pedal tractor race.

There will also be a craft show and a flea market. Anyone wishing to set up is asked to call (717) 265-2992.

Mifflinburg FFA

Teacher Michael Sanders of Mifflinburg RD 1 and Buffalo Valley Shopping Center owners Dr. and Mrs. Charles Fasano were honored by Mifflinburg FFA members during their 62nd annual parent-member banquet at Mifflinburg Area High School.

Sanders, who taught agriculture education at the high school during the first semester, was awarded an honorary chapter farmer degree. He has worked with students both in the classroom and on several projects and activities.

The Fasanos and Buffalo Valley Shopping Center received a citation for supporting FFA members starting livestock projects. The Center purchases FFA members' animals at the Union County West End Fair, sells them, and uses the proceeds for a livestock fund to help members with beginning project expenses.

Alan Kaler and Robert Sauers, Mifflinburg Area High School graduates, were recognized for receiving the American FFA Degree, the highest achievement degree granted by the national FFA.

Senior Deanna Kuhns was recognized as the FFA State Star Farmer, and graduate Kevin Rishel was recognized as the north central region Star Agribusinessman. Kuhns, Rishel, and senior Joshua Ruhl were honored as recipients of the Keystone Degree, the highest achievement degree given by the Pennsylvania FFA.

Graduate Douglas Boop received a state proficiency award in diversified crop production, and graduate Jason Christ received a state proficiency award in fruit and vegetable production.

Braden Heimbach received an award from the First National Trust Bank of Beavertown as the Union County Star Farmer. LeRoy Troester Jr. received the Star Chapter Farmer award, Matthew Willow received the Star Chapter Agribusinessman award, and Lucas Criswell received the Star Greenhand award.

Chapter proficiency awards went to Howard Aikey, poultry production; Thomas Aikey, agricultural electrification; Amy Bingaman, horse proficiency; Amber Blyler, specialty animal production; Jennifer Denius, agricultural sales and/or service; Daryl Ebersole, home and/or farmstead improvement; Richard Gensel, forest management; Kimber Groff, agricultural mechanics; Barry Hauck, diversified crop production; Braden Heimbach, agricultural processing and cereal grain production; Gesila Imgrund, sheep production; Travis Joy, prepared public speaking; Deanna Kuhns, placement in agricultural production; Derrick Moyer, swine production; Danielle Rishel, extemporaneous public speaking; Eric Roush, wildlife management; Joshua Ruhl, diversified livestock production and soil and water management; LeRoy Troester Jr.,

FFA Leadership Contests Held

KINZERS (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster County and Lancaster-Chester Area Leadership contests were held at Pequea Valley High School.

Leadership contests consist of parliamentary procedure, creed contest, and the following public speaking contests — senior prepared (6-8 minutes), junior prepared (3-5 minutes), extemporaneous (4-6 minutes), and conservation (6-8 minutes).

The Grassland Chapter at Garden Spot High School placed first in the parliamentary procedure contest with the Cloister FFA from Ephrata placing second. Judges for the contest were Harold Berkheiser, FFA advisor at the Cedar Crest High School and Clifford Horning of the Gehmans Feed Company in Denver and FFA alumni officer.

The senior prepared public speaking contest pitted 10 speakers from five schools. Placing first was Jacy Clugston from Manheim Central, followed by Heather Becker from Pequea Valley and Liz Hess from Manheim Central, third.

Serving as judges were Marlene Arnst, English teacher from Solanco High School; Gordon Hoover, FFA alumni member and dairy farmer from Gap area; and Douglas Hershberger, former FFA state president and currently a dairy farmer from the Quarryville area.

First-year FFA members participated in the junior public speaking contest. These speeches ranged 3-5 minutes in length. Placing first from Garden Spot was Connie Zeiset with a speech entitled "Integrated Pest Management". Placing second was Dave Parker from Penn Manor High School with a speech entitled "What the FFA Can Do For You." Third place went to Rebecca Hertzog, also from Penn Manor, with her speech, "Go For Your Goals." The extemporaneous public speaking contest had eight com-

GOOD DEALS... AND A GOOD DEAL MORE

Save your energy

The thrifty John Deere 335 packs more in the bale, leaves less on the ground

In the first place, we put the pickup and feed opening directly under the baler, as close to the ground as possible. This means you harvest more of the crop, and reduce chafing at the same time.

Inside, instead of hard-on-the-hay gathering chains we've added 3-ply nylon/polyester belts with an exclusive diamond tread that leads to faster bale starts without slipping... and without damaging your valuable hay.

Hydraulic bale tensioning is preset to increase bale weight and density. This means less shrinkage and more nutritious bales.

Hydraulic twine wrap and 3-ball twine storage comes as standard equipment. For a 45 percent increase in wrapping speed, you might be interested in our double twine-arm option. Bale ramps are another timesaving option; bales are guided to a soft landing ...no backing up is required.

The 335 can give you better bales of better hay, fast. Talk to your John Deere dealer today.

PUBLIC AUCTION

Of 132 Acre +/- York County Farm

Saturday, June 13, 1992 12:00 Noon

Located on Salt Lake Rd., Fawn Grove, Pa. In Fawn Township, York County.

This high quality farm consists of approximately 90 tillable acres, 10 acres of mature woodland and the balance pasture and buildings, spring fed stream runs through the pasture. Improvements include a well kept Cape Cod Style home with living room, dining room, modern kitchen and 2 bedrooms with FHA heating system and is in nice condition. The farm buildings include a 53'x58' bank barn with attached 17'x24' milk house. (Milk tank stays). Also a 31'x45' carriage shed, 26'x60' corn and wagon shed, 27'x45' machinery building, hog pen, smoke house and other typical farm buildings. 200 year old log and stone house in poor condition.

This lovely farm has not had animals on it for a few years and the grass is tall. If you are looking for a farm for dairy, beef or general crops here is a rare opportunity. The land is gently rolling high state of cultivation. Soil map shows the tillabe acreage to be mostly all CHESTER SILT LOAM and GLENELG CHANNERY SILT LOAM. Zoned agriculture.

Outstanding investment potential, this farm borders the Mason-Dixon line. It has approximately one-half mile of road frontage. It has never been subdivided and carries the full building right allowance and is not in Clean and Green.

Whatever your interests are this farm is sure to please you. Farms like this rarely hit the open market. Growing crops are reserved.

FAST GROWTH AND METABOLIC DISEASES IN POULTRY

Robert F. Wideman, Jr. Ph.D., Dept. of Poultry Science, PSU

Throughout the past decade we have witnessed remarkable improvements in the feed conversion values and growth rates of broilers and turkeys.

Modern meat birds are marvels of metabolic efficiency, but the progress we have promoted and enjoyed also has had certain unintended consequences. For example, we frequently observe increases in mortality when our fastest growing flocks are pushed to attain their full genetic potential for rapid growth. Overall, the development of highly sophisticated fast-growing meat birds appears to be associated with a gradual decline in field livability.

Problems with field livability in fast growing flocks often are caused by a failure of one or more of the organ systems needed to support rapid growth. In particular, it now appears that individual birds within any flock can outgrow the capacity of their heart to pump blood or the capacity of their lungs to add oxygen to the blood. Other birds within the flock appear to have hearts and lungs that are incapable of supporting even a moderate growth rate.

To understand how these problems develop, we need to understand that the heart pumps blood, carrying oxygen and nutrients to the tissues. Cells throughout the body, including the muscle cells that make up the desirable meat in broilers and turkeys, essentially "burn" or metabolize nutrients in the presence of oxygen to generate energy and heat.

In fast-growing birds, the volume of blood pumped by the heart must increase rapidly in order to deliver the required oxygen and nutrients to the body. The lungs also must have the capacity to accept and oxygenate the high volume of blood pumped through them by the heart. Fast growing birds die of heart or respiratory failure when the tissue demand for blood flow exceeds the functional capacities of their heart and lungs.

Scientists familiar with these problems have placed them in a general category known as metabolic diseases, because they are caused primarily by a bird's metabolic demand exceeding the capacity of its support organs or systems. Reductions in growth rates are economically impractical, but it is instructive to point out that metabolic diseases are eliminated when the growth rates of affected flocks are greatly reduced.

In developing strategies to reduce mortality because of metabolic diseases, we need to recognize that mortality can be aggravated by any factor that damages or further challenges the support organs. Worldwide experience has shown that proper ventilation is essential for providing optimal air quality and oxygen availability at bird level to facilitate blood oxygenation and avoid respiratory complications.

Maintaining a warm room temperature is equally important, because birds respond to cold temperatures by increasing their metabolic rate to generate body heat. Increases in metabolic demand because of cold stress, such as increased metabolic demand due to fast growth, forces the heart to increase the volume of blood it pumps. Cold stress will become an important cause of metabolic disease mortality as additional curtain-sided housing is built in Pennsylvania.

As we deal with very sophisticated modern strains of fast growing meat birds, we must evolve equally sophisticated techniques for helping flocks reach their full genetic potential under field conditions. We must recognize that, in spite of their relative size, these birds in fact are immature chicks with equally immature support systems.

The most recent research and field observations suggest that significant reductions in metabolic diseases can be attained by restricting growth rates between 5 and 14 days of age. It is believed that reducing early growth allows the skeleton, heart, and lungs to mature enough to support more rapid growth after two weeks of age.

When managed carefully, compensatory growth occurs following the growth restriction period, and flocks can reach a normal target weight at 42 days of age with lower flock mortality, fewer leg problems, and improved feed conversion.

Maryland Shorthorn Show Set

WOODBINE, Md. — The Maryland Shorthorn Association will host the sixth annual Eastern Regional Shorthorn Show on Friday, June 26th and Saturday, June 27 at the Howard County Fairgrounds in West Friendship, Md.

This annual event draws exhibitors from up and down the East Coast. Entries are expected to exceed 100 head this year.

The show will start with junior showmanship and the steer show on Friday evening at 7 p.m. On Saturday, the day will start with a judging clinic and contest for 4-H, FFA, and junior youth. Following this will be classes for females and bulls.

There will be an auction of Shorthorn semen from some of the most popular bulls in the breed. Proceeds will go to the Maryland Shorthorn Association to help fund the organization's many activities.

Judge for this year's field day is John Gunn, Paramount Stock Farm, Greenfield, Ind. He and his family have exhibited quality Shorthorn cattle throughout the country.

The Howard County Fairgrounds are located near the intersection of Highway 32 and Interstate 70, approximately 25 miles east of Frederick, Md.; or 12 miles west of the Baltimore Beltway.

DAIRY & ANIMAL SCIENCE
From Dairy and Animal Science at Penn State

Gary Killian

Gary Killian
Professor of Reproductive Physiology

Two proteins have been found in high concentration in semen from low fertility bulls. Penn State scientists in the Department of Dairy and Animal Science are trying to isolate these two proteins so that antibodies against them can be produced. This newest finding could have widespread implications for the artificial insemination (AI) industry.

Few procedures have helped the dairy farmer improve his herd as much as AI. In addition to providing frozen bull semen that is readily available and of the highest genetic quality, AI has also eliminated the need for keeping a dangerous mature dairy bull on many farms. Our continuing research and development at Penn State's Dairy Breeding Research Center (DBRC) seeks to further increase the benefits of using AI.

One of our goals at DRBC is to further enhance the fertility of the semen. This should be possible, because in any group of bulls there is a range in fertility. The fertility of a bull is currently determined when his semen is used for AI. The number of cows which become pregnant out of the total number of cows inseminated indicates the relative fertility of the bull.

Although most bulls have adequate fertility (65 to 75 percent of cows bred are settled), some bulls are significantly below (60 percent or lower). Once we know more about the factors which cause high and low fertility in bulls, the information could be used to increase the average fertility of bulls used in AI.

Unfortunately, because the AI center supplying the semen has no way of knowing the fertility of a bull until his semen is used on a group of cows, some bulls with lower fertility are being used. This costs farmers money, because it extends the average calving interval for the herd and the number of cows that require feed and care, but which are not producing income through milk production.

Research we are carrying out at Penn State, in cooperation with Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, Sire Power, and Eastern AI Cooperative, and with the support of a Ben Franklin Challenge Grant, promises to change this by developing a diagnostic test to detect subfertile bulls before they are used for AI.

The goal of our research is to find protein markers in semen which indicate a bull's fertility. Thus far, two proteins have been found in high concentration in semen from low fertility bulls. These compounds are present in only small amounts in bulls of average or high fertility. Once we have isolated the proteins, antibodies could be produced to develop an ELISA test (enzyme-linked immunoabsorbent assay) for routine use at AI centers. A simple color reaction, similar to the milk progesterone assay, could then be used to detect subfertile bulls before they enter young sire testing programs.

A diagnostic test to detect subfertile bulls also may have practical application in the beef industry, where information on the relative fertility of bulls is often lacking. Such a test could be used to market a bull by providing information on its fertility. In addition, the National Institutes of Health may be interested in this research for possible application to problems of low fertility in humans.

Over the years, faculty in Penn State's Department of Dairy and Animal Science have played key roles developing AI technology through research. Considered one of the most technical procedures in agriculture, AI is now commonly used on most Pennsylvania dairy farms, thanks to cooperative extension's efforts to adapt the technology and educate our farmers on its practical use. We at the DBRC continue to explore ways to make AI more useful to animal agriculture.

In Past 10 Years, Meat Consumption Has Changed

Robert E. Leiby
David L. Dunbar
Lehigh County
Extension Agents

During the past 10 years, worldwide meat consumption patterns have changed dramatically. Govemment regulations, changing lifestyles and incomes, and attitudes about the relationship of meat consumption to health are among the factors reshaping world demand.

The USDA's Economic Research Service reports that shifting patterns of world production and consumption have led to a four percent increase in meat trade each year since 1985. World meat production has also shown steady growth, increasing an average of three percent per year from 1985 to 1991. But growth in both production and trade is forecast to slow to about two percent in 1992.

While more people are consuming meat, growth in per capita consumption has not kept pace with increases in output. Global per capita consumption grew by less than one percent per year since 1985. Between 1975 and 1991, per capita meat consumption grew 23 percent, due primarily to increased consumption of poultry, up 65 percent.

On a per capita basis, the largest meat consumers are the U.S. (118 kg), Hungary (96 kg), Australia (106 kg), Denmark (99 kg), and Canada (97 kg). The European Community countries together consume 83 kg per capita, compared with Eastern Europe at 76 kg and the former Soviet republics at 67 kg annually.

Traditionally, beef has been the meat of choice for U.S. consumers, but poultry is forecast to achieve first place in 1992, measured on a carcass-weight or ready-to-cook basis. During the period 1975-1991, per capita beef consumption declined six percent, as poultry consumption cut into beef demand — both in the U.S. and in other regions of the world.

Poultry consumption per capita has grown more than 60 percent since 1975. Brazil recorded the largest growth — more than 200 percent. In the U.S. and the former USSR, per capita consumption was up over 80 and 90 percent.

Pork remains the predominant meat consumed in Europe. In the major reporting countries, per capita pork consumption rose 16 percent from 1975 to 1991, led by advances in China, Taiwan, and Denmark. But most of these gains were offset by declines in east central Europe and stagnant demand in most other regions. In many nations of the world, religious practices bar pork consumption.

Yeo Farms Announces Field Day Results

LOWELLVILLE, Ohio — Young people from four states competed in Yeo Farms' first Livestock Judging Contest and buyers from six states bid enthusiastically at Yeo Farms' sixth annual Club Lamb sale recently. Both events took place at the farm in Lowellville, Ohio.

Judging Contest Judging teams and individuals from Pennsylvania, Ohio, New York, and Maryland evaluated seven classes, each containing four animals. There were three classes of heifers and one class each of Suffolk yearling rams, Suffolk yearling ewes, Suffolk spring ram lambs, and Suffolk spring ewe lambs.

In the team competition, Washington County, Pa. won first place honors in both the junior and senior divisions. On the junior team were Jeanette Fidler of West Alexander, Crystal Hamilton of Prosperity, and Melissa and Darrin Lyle of Claysville. On the senior team were James Bane of Marianna, Heather Fidler of West Alexander, Becky Hamilton of Prosperity, and Chris Lyle of Claysville. Second place in the junior division went to Lake County Ohio's first team of the "Flockmasters" Club. The team was made up of Mike McDonald and Renee Cleversy of Painesville and Elizabeth Horton of Concord. In the senior division, second place was won by the Portage County, Ohio team of the "Steakmasters" made up of Violet Bervish of Windham as well as James and Charles Campbell of Diamond. Third place honors went to the "Steakmasters" of Portage County Ohio in the junior division and the Mahoning County team in the senior division.

In the individual competition, Nick DeChristofaro of Vienna, Ohio, won the blue ribbon in the junior division as did Becky Hamilton of Prosperity, Pa. in the senior division. Second and third places in the junior division were won by Renee Cleversy of Painesville, Ohio and Darrin Lyle of Claysville, Pa., respectively. In the senior division, the second and third places were won by James Campbell of Diamond, Ohio and by Robin Davis of Middletown, Md., respectively.

Club Lamb Sale

At the Yeo Farms Club Lamb Sale that afternoon, 45 club lambs were sold at an average price over $107, up more than 14 percent from the previous year. Represented at the sale were buyers from Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland, West Virginia, and Michigan. The highest selling lamb went to the DeChristofaro family of Vienna, Ohio for $300.

The sale featured lambs out of a specially chosen wether sire, "Double-Wide," owned jointly by Yeo Farms and Yellow Rose Sheep Company of Beaver, Pa. Of the 45 lambs sold, 32 were consigned by Yeo Farms and 13 by Yellow Rose.

Club lambs are used by members of 4-H and FFA clubs to compete in shows at county and state fairs. Lambs purchased at this sale in earlier years have been frequent winners at shows throughout eastern Ohio and western Pennsylvania.

Larry Garner, of Carrolton, Ohio, served as auctioneer. Moorman's Manufacturing Company contributed bags of feed for door prizes at the sale. The 4-H Club of Lawrence County, Pa., operated a snack bar all day, featuring hot sandwiches and homemade pies.

On-Farm Composting Conference Precedes Lancaster Tour

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — An On-Farm Composting Conference will be held at the Penn State Harrisburg Campus, Middletown, on August 4.

Techniques for on-farm composting, economic considerations, regulations, and marketing compost will be some of the topics covered during the day.

Cooperative efforts between municipalities and farms to compost yardwaste will also be discussed.

Speakers will include Dr. Thomas Richard from Cornell University, Leon Weber from the Rodale Research Center, and Dr. William Mitchell, professor emeritus at the University of Delaware.

Panel discussions by farmers who are operating composting sites will be part of the conference. Cost is $18 per person, which includes lunch.

On August 5, a tour will be conducted of on-farm composting operations in Lancaster County. The tour will include poultry manure, poultry carcasses, and dairy manure composting sites.

Cost for the tour is $12 per person, which includes bus transportation and lunch.

To register for the conference or farm tour, contact the Franklin County Penn State Cooperative Extension, 191 Franklin Farms Lane, Chambersburg, PA, 17201, (717) 263-9226.

FOCUS ON HORSES

Care at Foaling

During pregnancy, mares require a minimum of special care.

Although their length of gestation is 340 days, mares have been known to carry fetuses over one year, but many others foal 2 to 3 weeks before their 340- day "due" date.

Pregnant mares may be kept on pasture where they receive adequate nutrition and exercise, but if confined in a stall, mild but regular exercise to maintain muscle tone is recommended.

Most pleasure horse mares can be ridden up to the day of foaling without any harm. Approaching parturition (birthing) is indicated by distention of the udder 2 to 6 weeks before foaling, noticeable shrinkage of muscles near the tail head at 7 to 10 days prior to foaling, and presence of wax on the ends of the teats 4 to 6 days ahead of giving birth.

At this time, a pregnant mare's feed should be reduced which aids in easier foaling and reduces initial milk flow, preventing the newborn from getting diarrhea from consumption of too much milk. Immediately prior to foaling, mares become quite nervous, urinate frequently, lie down and get up frequently, and break out in a sweat.

Once started, normal foaling is accomplished in 15 to 30 minutes. Immediately following the birthing process, bacterial invasion of the umbilical cord is prevented by tincture of iodine. Soon after foaling, the mare and foal are usually turned out in a clean pasture where they get adequate exercise and nutrition.

Housing for Horses

Generally speaking, horses require little or no shelter. They are not delicate animals, and get along fine with the protection provided by trees and hillsides.

In severe cold, they require some shelter from the wind, and in severe heat, shade is advisable. Most horses, however, are kept in confinement and are provided box stalls.

Many confined horses still prefer to be outside in the rain or sun, and will do so if they have access to an outside paddock. It is important that barns and stables provide a comfortable and safe environment for horses in confinement.

Well-ventilated horse barns provide a continuous exchange of air, important in the dissipation of odors and foul air. Horses in well-ventilated, draft-free quarters have few respiratory problems. Box stalls are the preference of most horse owners when confining horses within a building.

Standard box stalls are 12 by 12 feet, while stalls for stallions and brood mares are 14 by 14 feet. Straight or tie stalls should be 9 feet long and 4.5 feet wide on the inside.

All interior surfaces of a box stall should be smooth, rugged, and free of projections. Smooth planking (preferably white oak) at least 1.5 inches thick is most satisfactory. Half-inch (or thicker) plywood or concrete blocks are also used with much success.

For additional information, ask your county agriculture agent for Penn State Extension Circular #347, "Housing for Horses."

The Important Foot

The foot of the horse primarily consists of the pedal bone and elastic structures encased in a hard outer shell or hoof wall. The hoof wall grows continuously, like the human fingernail.

Excessive or disproportionate growth tends to keep the horse off balance and places an excessive stress on the supporting tendons and ligaments. If neglected for long periods of time, lameness will usually result.

In addition, excessive wear must be prevented for most horses that are used for work or pleasure. Shoeing prevents the wear and protects the feet from injury. The hoof wall grows at a rate which requires reshoeing approximately every 6 to 8 weeks.

Foot problems are usually encountered in horses standing in bedding or areas covered with manure or soaked with urine.

One of the most common problems is thrush, caused by a necrotic fungus which deteriorates the tissues in the cleft of the frog or in the junction between the frog and bars. Many foot and leg problems can be avoided by careful inspection of horses prior to purchase, since poor confirmation of the feet and legs either directly or indirectly results in unsoundness or lameness.

Common Diaestive Ailments

There are several common digestive ailments which result from feeding dirty or moldy feed, abrupt changes in diet, or other improper management practices.

The horse is particularly susceptible to "colic" or stomachache, since he is unable to vomit. It is a symptom of abdominal pain that can be caused by several conditions including indigestion, poisons, an impacted caecum, improper watering, or bloodworms.

Azoturia occurs when a horse is exercised vigorously after a period of idleness in which the feed intake is high. It is associated with a fault in carbohydrate metabolism that is characterized by a sudden onset of a semiparalysis of the horse's legs.

Founder is an inflammation of the laminae of the foot which may be caused by overeating, overwork, drinking cold water while overheated, or inflammation of the uterus following foaling, but most commonly is due to overeating grain. Grain contains a toxin, histadine, that is formed during digesffon and when decarboxylated to histamine causes laminitis.

Heaves or chronic alveolar emphysema is a result of continued feeding of dusty or moldy feed. The horse can inhale normally, but cannot exhale properly because of the breakdown and loss of elasticity in some parts of the lungs.

All-Important Exercise

One of the most common mismanagement practices of today's horseman is infrequent exercise for pleasure horses.

Horses used for work and transportation do receive daily exercise, but the confined horse is more susceptible to poor health due to lack of activity.

A vigorous workout for about 30 minutes per day is necessary for the confined horse to maintain proper muscle tone and reduce boredom, which often results in wood chewing, cribbing, stall kicking, stall weaving, and pacing. Once one of these vices is acquired, it is difficult or impossible to break the habit.

The heavy-duty, 16 x 23 3-tie Model 515 Ford New Holland baler is customer-designed, according to Product Manager Jim Payton. "Engineering response to customer suggestions make the '515' our most reliable, large capacity, 3-tie baler in 50 years," he said.

3-Tie Baler Upgraded

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The new heavy-duty, high-density New Holland Model 515 3-tie baler from Ford New Holland is customer designed according to Ford New Holland Product Manager Jim Payton.

"Our design and service engineers carefully followed up with users of the previous Model 505 to discover what improvements might make a superior baler even better," said Payton. This continuing follow-up gave us a list of more than two dozen items. In some cases it was only improving the quality of a bolt. Other changes were much more substantial."

Payton said, The customer requests that generated the new Model 515 "helped us improve durability and reliability, improve feeding in light crops, reduce trash and build-up in the knotter area," he said. "We also added an optional size reduction kit."

Payton explained that, in some markets, hay is sold by the bale, not by weight. Custom operators in those areas requested a size reduction. For them, a bale case kit to reduce bale chamber size from 16x23" to 15x23" has been added as an option for the new Model 515.

Other "515" design changes include adding tines to the feeder assembly, beefing up tongue and chassis construction, an optional flat face plunger to improve bale and appearance in straw, improved motor mounts, and improvements in twine finger and knotter assemblies. Adjustable Hydroformatic bale tension drive clutch, ball hitch, tongue latch, and twine box design have also been updated.

"The result is a heavy-duty 3-tie baler for irrigated area commercial hay producers that has substantially improved reliability with large capacity," he said. "Model 515 bales are dense, square-shouldered units that handle, stack, and ship better. It came about because we're continuing our 50-year tradition of two-way customer communication and support."

Corn That's Borer-Proof? Maybe

LINCOLN, Neb. — It's a corn grower's dream, a corn plant that produces its own corn borer killing toxin. NC+ Hybrids and Crop Genetics International are attempting to make the dream come true.

For the past five years, NC+ and Crop Genetics have conducted joint field tests of seed corn vaccinated with the bioinsecticide InCide. InCide is a genetically altered microorganism which produces a substance toxic to European corn borer. The corn borer insect destroys an estimated 200 million bushels of corn each year.)

Lonnie Hester, NC+ Hybrids corn research manager, reports some progress with the research project, but said it's still unclear when planting seed corn treated with InCide will be effective and economical for control of corn borers.

Hester said corn plants containing the InCide gene are less susceptible to corn borer damage, but researchers have found reduced yields in some hybrids vaccinated with the gene.

"So far the gene hasn't lowered corn borer numbers enough to make up for the reductions in yield," Hester said.

"The joint field tests will continue in 1992," Hester said. "The theory is good, but there's lots of research to be done before anything will be available commercially."

Jim Davis, research director at Crop Genetics International, based in Hanover, Md., said he is still excited about the concept.

"In 1991 field tests, we saw corn borer damage reduced by up to 72 percent in some varieties," Davis said. "Our goal is to develop a product that consistently reduces corn borer damage by 60 to 90 percent in a wide range of commercial corn varieties."

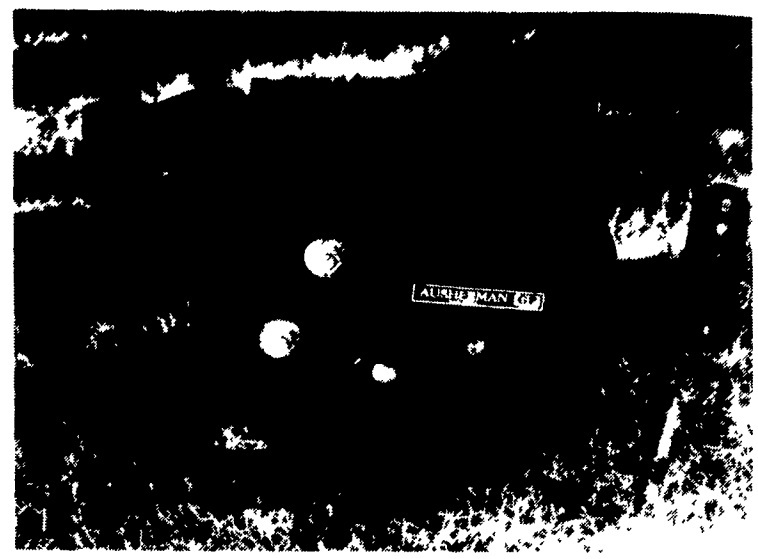
This year the researchers will test different endophytes, or carriers for InCide, Davis said. They will try to achieve a higher level of insect control and improve yields as well.

"We're making considerable progress," Davis said. "However, we have a lot more work to do."

NC+ Hybrids President Gary Duncan said that whether or not the InCide project is successful, NC+'s participation is positive.

NC+ provides the land, seed and labor for the tests, which are conducted at the NC+ Research Center near Hastings, Neb. Crop Genetics International provides the bioinsecticide, InCide, which they developed and are patenting. Twenty different NC+ corn hybrids have been field tested with InCide.

Coulter Has Nonplugging Coil Tine Applicator

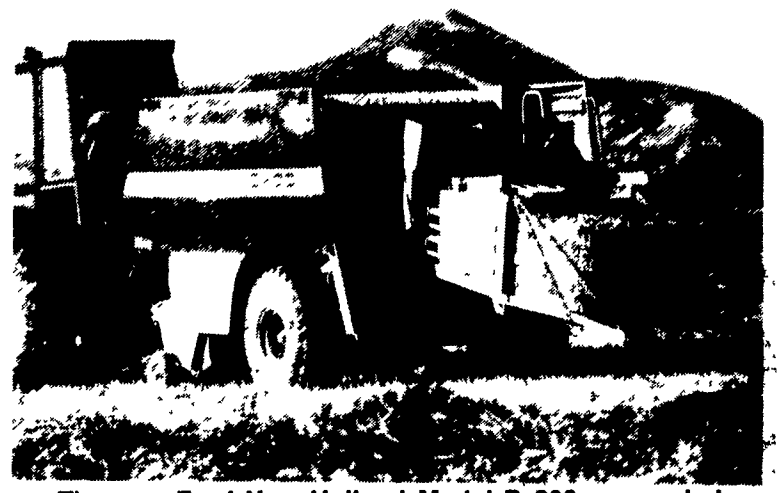


ASSARIA, Kan. — Ausherman GP, a division of Great Plains Manufacturing, announces its new Vantage I 17-inch coil tine fertilizer coulter.

This new fertilizer coulter is designed for use with liquid fertilizer. It's equipped with a non-plugging coil tine applicator with a stainless steel nozzle assembly for low pressure fertilizer injection.

The time and nozzle are positioned to inject fertilizer into the bottom of the trench before the soil can fill back in. Ausherman's coil tine fertilizer coulter is designed to run in no-till, minimum till, or conventional conditions and will fit on most planters and tool bars.

For more information, contact John Martin, Ausherman GP, P.O. Box 218, Assaria, KS 67416, (913) 667-4755.



The new Ford New Holland Model D 800 square baler produces 2 x 3 x 8-foot bales for large acreage growers and ranchers. Bale size allows more economical use of truck capacity within Interstate highway load height limits. D 800 bales are 15 percent denser than smaller section bales.

Bale Chamber Ties With 4 Knotters

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The new New Holland Model D 800 with 2 x 3-foot bale chamber ties with four knotters and turns out bales up to eight feet long. The new baler is designed for large acreage producers and ranchers who handle hay mechanically for local or long-distance shipping.

"The 2 x 3 x 8 bale size lets shippers make fullest use of load capacity within interstate truck height restrictions," said Product Manager Jim Payton. "Bale size of the new Model D 800 is the same as that of the more deluxe D 1000 equipped with Bale Command and automatic bale density control."

The "D 800" has manually adjusted hydraulic bale density control. Knotters are zerk-lubricated and a two-stroke feeder fills the bale case.

"As a result, the "D 800" is a more economical purchase," said Payton.

Extensive field testing shows the "D 800" performs well in North American conditions where large high-density hay and straw bales are preferred for mechanical handling, shipping, and processing.

The "D 800" will help Dakota, Colorado, and Nebraska alfalfa producers supply large Texas or Florida and Georgia dairies with leafy, high-quality feed at a more economical transport cost, according to Payton. At the dairy, the 2x3' bales are easily processed through tub grinders for inclusion in the total mixed rations that are standard practice where large herds are expected to average more than 20,000 pounds of milk per cow.

Names Area Manager

CONESTOGA (Lancaster Co.) — Agri-King recently named Jerry Hershey area manager of northwestern Lancaster County.

Hershey has several years of experience in the livestock and sales and service field, having been a self-employed dairy farmer for four years and sales and service representative for the past 16 years. He was previously employed with Vicon Farm Machinery in Memphis, Tenn.

Agri-King tests feedstuffs and formulates rations for livestock producers in 27 states. The 24-year-old livestock nutrition company serves customers from Nebraska to New York. Agri-King's home office is located in Fulton, Ill.

Now The Choice Is More Cut And Dried than Ever.

Case IH now has eight high-performance mower conditioners that give you a choice for every size haying operation.

And each one comes fully equipped with features you'll find nowhere else.

Example: Dual opposed rotation augers on the 12-foot 8360 center pivot model. Augers distribute the crop evenly over the full 110-inch width of the conditioning rolls. And their gentle action keeps nutritious leaves from being rubbed off.

For non-stop cutting performance, the 8340 features conditioning rolls that separate to let heavy crop slugs pass through, and then automatically return to preset pressure.

And for difficult conditions, you won't find a more effective machine than the 3309 disc mower. Its seven rotating oval discs slice through crops with ease, while its conditioning rolls crush and crimp your crop thoroughly, yet gently.

Your nearby Case IH dealer is the place to see this wide selection of mower conditioners. Check them out to see why the choice is now more cut and dried than ever.

Forest Stewardship Program Serves Landowners, Community

"The forest is far more than a collection of trees"
—Gifford Pinchot

THOMAS ANUNDSON
ELLEN O'DONNELL
Forestry Specialists
Penn State University

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Suppose you own some forestland and are concerned because you haven't been seeing much wildlife.

Perhaps you have a wetland on your property and want to enhance it by establishing nesting areas and food sources for waterfowl.

Maybe you would like to thin the stand and use the firewood, but aren't sure which trees to remove. Perhaps you've been approached by someone wanting to buy your trees and aren't sure of their value or the correct way to harvest them.

You decide to ask your neighbor about the timber sale he had last fall. He tells you somebody just stopped by his house and offered him a bunch of money for the biggest trees.

"How do you know if they did a good job or paid you fairly?," you ask. He replies, "Well, I guess I really don't. I just figured they knew what they were doing."

Somehow, you think, there's got to be a better way. Where can you go for guidance and assistance? Who can help you implement these practices? What can you legally do on your property? What is best for your specific objectives?

These are some of the most common questions asked by Pennsylvania's private forest landowners. The new Pennsylvania Forest Stewardship program can provide the answers.

In addition to providing heating fuel, building supplies and protection from weather extremes, forests also provide habitat for a multitude of plants and animals. Indiginous bird species, many of which depend on forests, can be aided in maintaining their numbers through simple, but effective housing projects.

What is Forest Stewardship?

By definition, forest stewardship is the wise management and use of our forest resources to ensure their health and productivity for years to come. Stewardship challenges us to look beyond our immediate personal needs so we can leave a living legacy for future generations.

Forests provide us with many benefits necessary for life itself. They protect soils from erosion, purify our water, cleanse the air we breathe, and provide wood products, food, and recreational opportunities.

Other benefits, including breathtaking scenery and peaceful tranquility, enrich our lives and provide us with a sense of well-being. Forests offer an escape from everyday tasks and help us appreciate the beauty of nature.

The wondrous displays of color splashed across the hills each fall, the snow-laden forests glistening in the sunshine, the thrill of sighting wildlife, the songs of birds, and the aromas of fragrant spring flowers add to the wonder that is Pennsylvania.

Countless plant and animal species combined with other nonliving things make up an ever-changing biological community that is continuously being influenced by natural elements like wind, rain, and sunshine.

This complex ecological web serves as an indicator of our planet's health. Only by understanding and maintaining this complex system will we be able to solve environmental problems such as pollution and global warming. It is up to us to see that our

With fewer places left for children to explore the natural world, unencumbered by artificial demands, landowners can develop forests on their property. The forests provide a healthy individual classroom and playground for children, in addition to benefitting the total environment for the landowner.

Adults also turn to forests and the natural beauty to seek escape from the demands of other people and society.

Forest Stewardship Program

forests remain healthy and continue to meet the needs of ours and future generations.

Forests and Trees

Forests encompass all that is fragile, from the tiniest microorganisms to the largest trees. When discussing forest management, it is important to distinguish between trees and forests.

Trees are renewable — they grow, die, and are replaced. The act of harvesting trees doesn't affect the life of the forest as much as how they are harvested.

Forest Stewardship challenges us to consider these natural processes in each decision we make. Through careful consideration and planning, we can continue to enrich the lives of all dependents of the forest — wildlife, humans, and generations yet to come.

Why do we need a Forest Stewardship Program?

More than 11.5 million acres of Pennsylvania's 16 million acres of forests belong to nearly a half million private landowners; however, the average ownership is just 23 acres.

Only an estimated 20 percent of the 11,000 timber harvests conducted annually on these lands involve a qualified forest manager. Should we be concerned that nearly 9,000 timber harvests occur annually without the benefit of professional resource management expertise? YES!

A trained resource professional can help to ensure that the landowner's objectives are met and that the future productivity of the forest is protected.

So, why is forest stewardship important to all Pennsylvanians?

In addition to providing us with many environmental and aesthetic benefits, our forests also make up an essential part of the state's economy. Pennsylvania's $4.5 billion forest products industry employs over 100,000 people and produces more than 1 billion feet of lumber and over 780,000 tons of paper annually.

Hunting license revenues total over $25 million each year, and countless dollars are spent on hunting supplies, transportation, and other essentials.

In addition, countless dollars are spent annually on tourism and other forms of recreation.

Forest Stewardship: A New Pennsylvania Program

The goal of the Forest Stewardship Program is to provide information, education, and technical assistance to encourage, assist, and recognize forest landowners who keep their lands and natural resources productive and healthy.

Landowner education is accomplished through workshops, multimedia public service messages, television and radio programs, and publications like this one.

Technical assistance for landowners is provided through state service foresters and other trained resource professionals. As part of the educational component of Pennsylvania's program, Penn State's School of Forest Resources, in conjunction with the Bureau of Forestly, develops and distributes stewardship educational matelials, and conducts workshops for forest landowners.

The Forest Stewardship Program and the Stewardship Incentive Program (SIP) are two of several programs authorized under the Forestly Title of the 1990 Farm Bill. Both are nationally administered by the USDA Forest Service and are directed in Pennsylvania by the DER Bureau of Forestry with guidance from a statewide steering committee.

SIP is a cost-share program administered cooperatively in Pennsylvania through the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) and the Bureau of Forestry. In short, the Forest Stewardship Program encourages landowners to learn more about natural resource management, and offers direct assistance to those who wish to properly care for their lands.

Forest Stewardship

become a forest steward, but to qualify for federal cost share assistance under SIP you must:

a. Be a private individual, group, association, or private corporation not involved in the manufacture of forest products.

b. Own between 5 and 1,000 acres of forestland in Pennsylvania (a waiver may be requested from the Bureau of Forestry if you own more than 1,000, but less than 5,000 acres.).

c. Have property that is forested land or suitable for growing trees (non-forested areas which will be managed under a SIP practice can also be counted as eligible acreage.).

Under SIP, landowners can implement their choice(s) of eight general practices:

1. Landowner Forest Stewardship Plan Development: This practice provides landowners with a multi-disciplinary, action-oriented plan they can implement on their properties. To qualify for cost- sharing, landowners must sign a pledge of intent to abide by the written plan through the peliod indicated.

2. Reforestation and Afforestation: Promoting the regrowth of our forests is essential to continued diversity; this practice encourages preparing sites for planting trees, establishing natural regeneration, controlling erosion, installing tree shelters and weed barriers, mulching, animal repellent use, fertilizing, and fencing.

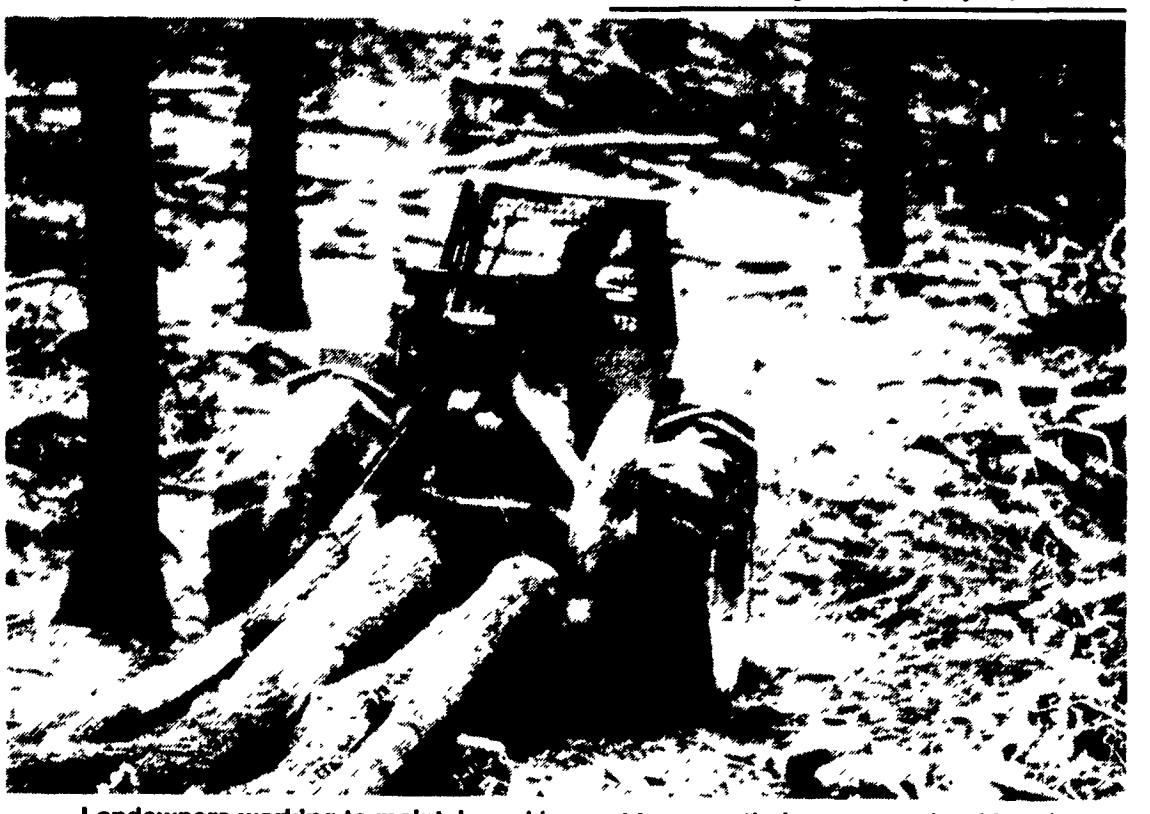
3. Forest and Agroforest Improvement: This practice helps landowners improve the overall health of the forest through selective cutting. Planting desirable species, noncommercial thinning, removing competing vines, and fertilizing and fencing are also included.

4. Soil and Water Protection and Improvement: Maintaining and improving soil and water quality and preventing erosion are the objectives here. Cost sharing is available for establishing permanent vegetative cover; designing and laying out forest roads, stream crossings and drainage systems; installing water diversion devices, fertilizing, and fencing.

5. Riparian and Wetland Protection and Improvement: The purpose of this practice is to protect, restore, and improve wetlands and riparian areas. Cost-share assistance is available for establishing forest buffers, restoring original hydrology, stabilizing streambanks, establishing permanent vegetative cover, fertilizing, and fencing.

6. Fisheries Habitat Enhancement: This practice helps enhance fish habitat by providing incentives for constructing and installing habitat improvement and stocking structures, modifying habitats for threatened and endangered aquatic species, establishing in-stream woody debris, enhancing existing food supplies, providing spawning areas, and fencing.

7. Wildlife Habitat Enhancement: This practice assists wildlife habitat improvement efforts by providing monies for planting cover for wildlife, creating forest openings, controlling weed species, thinning forested areas, installing tree shelters, creating snags, establishing wildlife water facilities and wildlife corridors, building artificial cavities, nest boxes, roost poles, or platforms. Also included are establishing threatened or endangered species of flora, and modifying habitat for those species.



Landowners working to maintain and harvest trees on their property should seek the advice of a qualified forester, in order to protect the value and profits in forestland. However, most of the state's landowners open their forests to tree cutters, rather than qualified forest managers.

8. Forest Recreation Enhancement: This practice serves to enhance activities such as hiking, skiing, horseback riding, hunting, fishing, mushroom picking, and more. Approved practices include establishing permanent cover, establishing paths and trails, reducing stand density, pruning, and fencing to protect historic properties.

For each of the eight practices, cost-share rates may not exceed 75 percent of the cost of establishing the practice. Participating landowners may receive reimbursement of up to $10,000 annually for the cost of implementation. The only stipulation is that the landowner must promise to maintain the practice for a minimum of 10 years. If the property is sold, the buyer must agree to maintain the practice, too. If the practice is altered, landowners will be responsible for reimbursing the government for monies they received as cost-share.

How To Receive Assistance

If you want to receive future forest stewardship publications, call The Stewardship Hotline at 1-800-235-WISE, and specify that you want to be added to the mailing list.

For specific on-site questions call your State Bureau of Forestry service forester. Your service forester will assist you in gathering information about your property and determining your objectives, and will then refer you to appropriate stewardship resource professionals in your area.

You must agree to use a stewardship resource professional to develop a Forest Stewardship Plan, which will serve as your management guide. Remember, under the Stewardship Incentive Program, landowners can obtain cost-sharing to cover 75 percent of the cost of developing this plan.

To apply for SIP cost-sharing, contact the ASCS office nearest you.

Many practices may be eligible that aren't listed in this brief overview, so don't hesitate to contact your state forester or The Stewardship Hotline.

No two people want exactly the same things from their forestlands. The wealth of resources our state is gifted with makes the possibilities endless. With a little time and effort, you can transform your forestland into a natural community thriving with life.

The investment you make now will pay for itself 100 times over in the future, either in monetary terms or in satisfaction with what you have accomplished for yourself, your children, and the environment.

You can do your part in keeping our state and our nation clean, healthy, and beautiful. As Aldo Leopold wrote, "A thing is right when it tends to preserve the integrity, stability, and beauty of the biotic community. It is wrong when it tends otherwise."

Through the Pennsylvania Forest Stewardship Program, you can do the right thing and help make our forestlands someplace our children can be proud of!

SCHAEFER Barn Kooler®

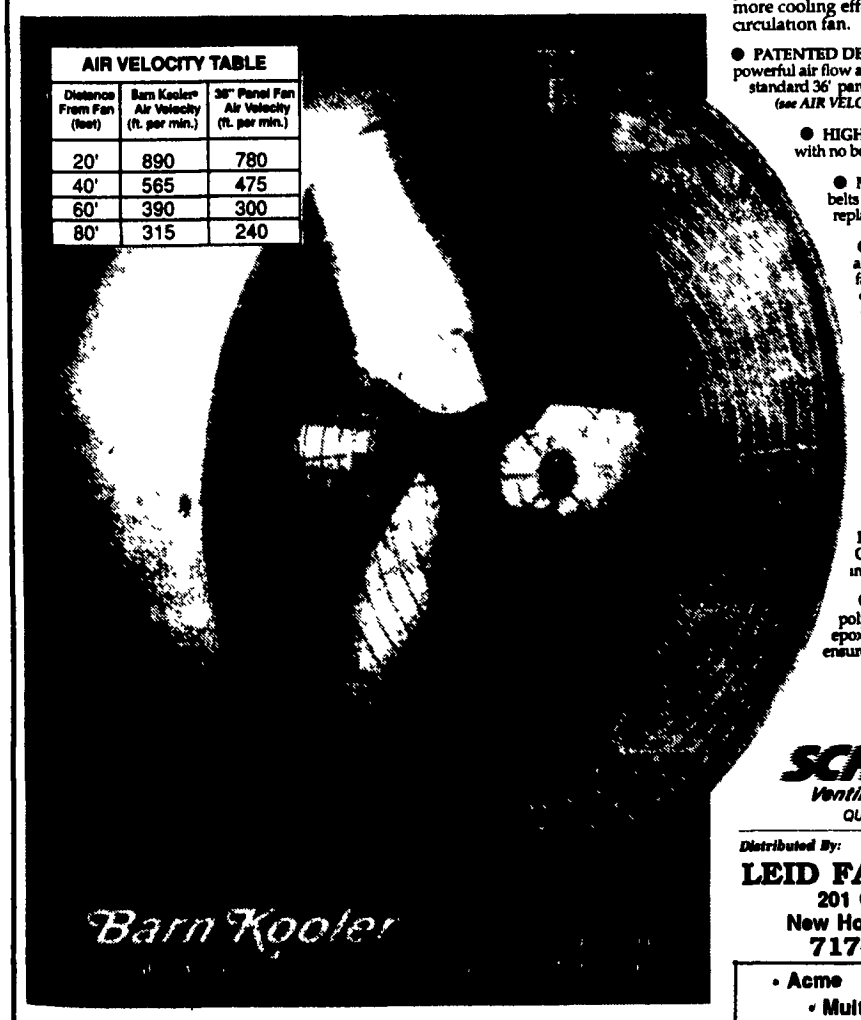
Big! Powerful! Energy Efficient!

The quality will impress you. The performance will astound you.

The Schaefer Barn Kooler® is the only patented air circulation fan on the market today! Because of its unique design, it provides more air velocity and therefore, more cooling effect than any other air circulation fan.

AIR VELOCITY TABLE

Distance From Fan (feet)	Barn Kooler® Air Velocity (ft. per min.)	36" Panel Fan Air Velocity (ft. per min.)
20'	890	780
40'	565	475
60'	390	300
80'	315	240



- PATENTED DESIGN provides for more powerful air flow at a greater velocity than standard 36' panel fans in wooden crates. (see AIR VELOCITY TABLE)
- HIGH CFM/WATT EFFICIENCY with no belt losses (20.2 CFM/WATT)
- MAINTENANCE-FREE – no belts or pulleys to adjust or replace. No bearings to grease
- UNIQUE DESIGN causes air to spread out at discharge of fan creating a wide stream of cooling air movement, thereby eliminating the need for any expensive oscillator
- PATENTED GUARD DESIGN provides same safety features as an OSHA guard, but does not restrict air flow!
- ENERGY EFFICIENT, 1/2 H.P, 230 volt, PSC motor with no internal motor switch to wear out!
- DESIGNED TO MOUNT RIGHT UP TO THE CEILING Ceiling mount bracket included
- RUGGED high molecular polyethylene fan housing with epoxy-coated front and rear guards ensure long life and durability

Pa. Pork Producer Achieves National Post

CHICAGO, Ill. — David A. Reinecker, York Springs, has become the first Pennsylvanian elected as an officer of the National Live Stock and Meat Board's Pork Industry Group. During its annual meeting here recently, pork producers named Reinecker as its vice chairman.

In this role, Reinecker will be a vital part in the pork industry's national producer checkoff program, including chairman of the Pork Industry Group's Budget Committee and a member of its Executive Committee.

Specifically, he will guide the industry's consumer information, school education, meat science, human nutrition research and product technology research, areas the pork industry depends on the Meat Board's Pork Industry Group to conduct.

Reinecker, a state pork industry leader, was named as the Pork Industry Group's Pennsylvania director in 1991. He served as vice chairman of the Education Committee last year.

"We've known for some time that physicians have to become better educated about nutrition in general and pork's leaner products. We're taking aggressive tactics to accomplish this goal. Another high priority is education of this country's youth, who have very little understanding of agriculture and are vulnerable to misinformation," Reinecker said.

What's ahead for the pork industry? Reinecker is optimistic — though with a realization of the mountains still to climb.

David A. Reinecker

"We have to constantly assure the consumer that pork is a product worthy of their trust — something that is of high quality, healthful, and wholesome. And, we can take nothing for granted. The consumer does not owe it to us as pork producers to buy our products. Rather, we owe consumers the products they want to buy," Reinecker said.

As a national leader, one of Reinecker's goals is to help the industry unite with its allies, such as packers and processors and other meat industry segments. "There are times when pork is definitely competing for the consumer's palate and pocketbook with beef and lamb. On the other hand, there are issues that demand a united front for the benefit of the meat industry and agriculture." This is one reason Reinecker became involved in the Pork Industry Group of the Meat Board.

"The Meat Board is the only forum existing for the pork producer to link with the other farm-to-market segments, such as other livestock producers, packers, processors, and food marketers. We need this meat industry coalition more than ever as we feel the impact of such issues as diet-health and food safety. These are consumer concerns that affect everyone in animal agriculture — from the pork producer to the meat manager at the local supermarket."

An owner of a feeder pig finishing operation that markets 1,500 animals annually, Reinecker is no stranger to the industry or its demand-building efforts. The list is long: past vice president and president of the Pennsylvania Pork Producer Council and currently on its Promotion Committee; member of the industry's Program Development Groups, which guide demand-building efforts; 1985 Pennsylvania Pork All-American; and delegate to the National Pork Board and National Pork Producers Council annual meetings.

Soy Board Funds University of Delaware Research

NEWARK, Del. — The Delaware Soybean Board has awarded $34,800 to the University of Delaware College of Agricultural Sciences for research designed to improve the profitability of soybean production under Delaware growing conditions.

Nine projects were funded. They will be conducted by Agricultural Experiment Station scientists and cooperative extension specialists.

The projects include identification of soybean cultivars tolerant to the toxin produced by some bradyrhizobia (nitrogen-fixing bacteria), evaluation of the potential to increase soybean yields through increased nitrogen fixation, performance evaluation of soybean varieties in a double-crop system, performance evaluation of single-crop soybean varieties in Delaware, and soybean maturity selection for double-cropping and replant situations.

Two herbicide-related studies concern soybean variety response to postemergence applications of 2,4-DB and low-cost weed control programs for soybean production.

Two other projects address the problem of soybean cyst nematodes. One of these is an ongoing regional evaluation of soybean varieties for nematode resistance. The other is a new nematode assay program designed to encourage Delaware soybean producers to sample their fields for the presence of soybean cyst nematodes.

Increase Pasture Yields and lots more!

Original "Spreading Action"® tines give better coverage at much higher speeds. Adjusts without tools to provide the right penetration for a big variety of jobs!

PASTURES: Increases quality and quantity of feed from pastures. Aerates to stimulate growth and improve moisture penetration Scatters droppings, reducing parasites. Prepares soil for overseeding without disturbing existing growth. Works in seed and fertilizer. Many owners report pasture yield increases of 15%.

HERBICIDE INCORPORATION: Independent research using black light photography proves the Fuerst Harrow behind your disk or cultivator gives you "near perfect" incorporation in one pass--better than implements costing several times more! Shreds trash as it prepares & levels seedbeds

BROADCASTING SMALL GRAINS AND GRASSES: University of Illinois found overseeding by broadcasting followed by a Fuerst Harrow a superior combination, out-performing equipment costing more than 10 times as much Pulled behind the broadcaster, it covers seed to desired depth in one time-saving operation.

SHREDS STALKS: Shreds and spreads stalks in spring ahead of no-till and ridge-till planting.

4 to 42 ft. widths. Flexes to cover every inch at 6-8 mph. No maintenance. Easy to use and store. Insist on the original "Spreading Action"® tines.

Corn Nitrogen Test At Delaware Soils Lab

NEWARK, Del. — A new test is available at the University of Delaware Soil Testing Laboratory that will allow corn growers to assess the nitrogen levels in their fields when the plants most need this nutrient.

By applying only the amount of nitrogen that plants can use, growers will save money as well as reduce the amount of nitrogen that ends up in groundwater.

Dr J. Thomas Sims, University of Delaware associate professor of soil fertility, said, "Increasing concerns about nitrate leaching to groundwater have resulted in intensified research efforts to develop soil tests that can help growers identify economically and environmentally sound nitrogen rates for corn."

The pre-sidedress nitrogen test (PSNT) was developed in Vermont and has been tested and used commercially in many eastern and midwestern states. A soil test is taken when the corn stand is about 10 to 12 inches high — just before its growth spurt that will last until silking. During this period, the corn plant needs nitrogen to develop properly.

"The test is based on the concept that the soil nitrate-nitrogen level early in the growing season is proportional to the amount of nitrogen that will be available from the soil and organic sources, including manures and crop residues, recently added to the soil," Sims said. "The remainder of the crop's nitrogen requirement can then be supplied by sidedressing nitrogen when the plant's growth spurt demands it."

The test allows growers to wait until the last possible moment to make a decision on whether or not to apply nitrogen. The amount of nitrogen recommended will be based on test results as well as management factors, including expected yield goal, plant stand, and pest or weed pressure.

If an early corn crop looks very healthy, the grower may want to increase nitrogen application in anticipation of a higher yield goal. If the crop looks poor or severe weather conditions such as excessive rain or drought have occurred, nitrogen application may be adjusted downward.

Sims notes that in the three years that the test has been studied, many farms in Delaware, Maryland, and Pennsylvania have had results that indicated no sidedress nitrogen application was needed. This has resulted in an economic savings for the grower as well as reduced a potentially negative impact on water quality.

"The PSNT is quick and easy to perform and can be conducted by farmers, cooperative extension agents, crop consultants, or through the University of Delaware's Soil Testing Laboratory," said Karen Gartley, program coordinator of the soil testing lab.

Soil testing personnel will phone growers with test results within two days of the sample's arrival in the laboratory, Gartley said. A written report form will also be mailed.

Unlike a routine soil test in which the levels of individual nutrients evaluated vary little between the time of sampling and the time of analysis, the PSNT evaluates nitrate-nitrogen, a form of soil nitrogen that is highly susceptible to changes due to fluctuating soil temperature and moisture conditions.

For this reason, sample preparation is different from that used with routine soil samples. Several steps including drying the soil sample must be followed carefully.

Ag Economist Retires, Holds Emeritus Rank

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Alvi O. Voigt, professor of agricultural economics in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, retired January 1 with emeritus rank after 35 years of service.

A native of Reading, Voigt attended Albright College and served as an aviator in the U.S. Navy from 1948 to 1953 before receiving his bachelor's and master's degrees in agricultural economics from Penn State. He joined the university faculty as an extension marketing specialist in 1956. He was named assistant professor in 1957, associate professor in 1962, and professor in 1973.

Voigt received international attention for his extension education program in marketing floriculture and ornamental nursery products, which emphasized identifying and finding solutions to the industry's marketing problems. Working with industry entrepreneurs, Voigt authored business analyses of retail florists and garden centers in Pennsylvania.

Voigt has addressed many floriculture and nursery conferences in the U.S. and Canada. In 1973, he received the Society of American Florists Education Research Award for his sabbatical project, "Exploration of New Developments in the Flower Industry."

"Flower Marketing Information," a newsletter Voigt started in 1956, is read by more than 3,000 growers and floriculture professionals. The newsletter helped establish mutually beneficial contacts between industry, the trade press, trade associations, and educators at many colleges and universities.

Voigt is a honorary member of the Pennsylvania Flower Growers Association and the Pennsylvania Retail Florist Association. His annual national season sales analyses for the Professional Plant Growers Association earned Voigt their 1987 Resource Development Award as "an exceptional source of information for the bedding and flowering plant industry."

He was a member of the University Faculty Senate from 1973 to 1986, serving on many committees. He vice-chaired both the external affairs and Commonwealth Campuses/Continuing Education committees.

Bush Hog Announces Gear Box Warranty

SELMA, Ala. — The longest flex wing cutter limited warranty in the industry has been announced by Bush Hog in time for the summer cutting season.

The new limited warranty increases the warranty period for Bush Hog flex wing rotary cutter gearboxes by 300 percent. The company's previous gearbox warranty was for one year. The new limited warranty is for three years. It has been made retroactive to cover all Bush Hog flex wing cutters purchased at retail since January 1, 1992.

"Our research indicates that this warranty is the longest and the most comprehensive in the industry," said Robert O. Moore, Bush Hog vice president, sales. "It underscores the confidence we have in our flex wing cutter gearboxes and in the design, manufacturing, and service of our equipment."

Bush Hog rotary cutter gearboxes are the only gearboxes in the rotary cutter industry that are designed and built to Bush Hog specifications that have been developed during over 41 years in the rotary cutter industry, Moore said. Only Bush Hog - designed gearboxes are used on Bush Hog rotary cutters and only Bush Hog - designed gearboxes carry the Bush Hog brand name.

Under the terms of the new limited warranty, Bush Hog flex wing rotary cutter dealers will repair or replace Bush Hog flex wing rotary cutter gearboxes covered by the new warranty for up to three years at no cost to the customer when they have failed due to normal wear and tear. Abuse and failure to operate properly such as failure to maintain the proper lubricant level are not covered. Customers should review the new limited warranty literature available free from Bush Hog for full details.

In addition to the new limited warranty, Bush Hog has told its flex wing cutter dealers that it will pay the air freight on any parts covered under the new warranty if they aren't shipped from the company's headquarters or one of its parts distribution centers within 24 hours of the order being received. Last year, Bush Hog averaged 96 percent of all service parts shipped within 24 hours of the order being received from a Bush Hog dealer.

Moore said the new limited warranty is another step in Bush Hog's quest for continuous improvement in both products and service. Earlier this year, the company announced its focused factories concept that brings every Bush Hog employee closer to the customer so they can better understand and service customer needs.

"Our objective isn't to just meet customer needs," Moore said. "Our objective is to anticipate customer needs and meet those anticipated needs. The new limited warranty is just one of many examples of our delivery on this promise."

In addition to helping to make the three-year warranty possible, Moore said Bush Hog's focused factory concept is benefiting dealers and customers in other ways. For example, when requested by the dealer, Bush Hog flex wing cutters are fully assembled prior to shipment, employees insure that all parts are shipped with all Bush Hog machines, parts shipment response has been improved across the entire product line, and cost controls developed by the employees are helping to keep prices practical.

"We are determined to help our customers take advantage of these improvements and provide them with the opportunity by producing free comparison literature that compares the features of our products with competition," Moore said. "Called our Building the Legend program, the comparisons help customers get the best value. They are available free to all customers and dealers."

For free literature on the new Bush Hog limited gearbox warranty, write Bush Hog, Dept. NR-W, P.O. Box 1039, Selma, Al 36702-1039, (205) 872-6261.

Land Trusts Preserve Landscape

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — More than 3,000 acres of wetlands, farms, and forests in the United States are sold for development each day. But since the late 1800s, land trusts have been working to permanently protect these and other valuable lands.

Land trusts, or land conservancies, are nonprofit organizations that preserve land to benefit the environment and the public. The nearly 900 regional, statewide, and national land trusts in the United States have protected more than 2.7 million acres.

Farms, forests, wetlands, watersheds, urban gardens, historical buildings, and other kinds of property can be protected from development through different arrangements with land trust organizations.

"Land trusts range from small, local groups that protect only a few acres to large national organizations like the Nature Conservancy, which manages millions of acres and employs large staffs of professionals," said Steven Thorne, Maurice K. Goddard professor of forestry and environmental resources in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "Perhaps the organizations' biggest strength is that they can be designed to meet the needs of particular communities or areas."

Property owners can arrange with a land trust to protect their land without selling it. One of the most effective and flexible ways to do this is through a conservation easement.

"In a conservation easement, the landowner and land trust enter into a legal agreement permanently restricting development of the property," said Thorne. "The land stays in private ownership, and the organization sees that development restrictions are carried out even if ownership changes."

Another way to protect land is through a life estate. With this arrangement, a landowner sells or donates land but retains the right to live on it throughout his or her lifetime. When the landowner dies, the land trust remains permanent owner of the property.

Landowners who no longer wish to live on their property can donate or will it outright. Many land trusts also buy property, sometimes for less than market value. This arrangement, called a bargain sale, stretches the organization's land acquisition budget and provides tax advantages for the seller.

"Sometimes an owner would like his or her land to go to a land trust organization but can't afford to donate it or sell it at bargain price," said Thorne. "In this case, the owner can work with the land trust to arrange for part of the property to be developed to finance conservation of the rest. Development often can be done so that the land is harmed as little as possible."

If you decide to conserve property in cooperation with a land trust, the organization will help you obtain professional assistance in estate planning, reviewing tax and conservation laws, and environmental and land planning.

Because an arrangement with a land trust is legally binding, you can be reasonably sure that the land will be preserved indefinitely, even if the land no longer meets the organization's conservation requirements.

There are more than 40 land trust organizations in the state, including the Northcentral Pennsylvania Conservancy, the Western Pennsylvania Conservancy, the Pennypack Watershed Association in southeastern Pennsylvania, and the West Branch Conservancy in central Pennsylvania.

To find out more about land trusts and to locate one near you, call or write The Land Trust Alliance, Suite 410, 900 17th St. N.W., Washington, DC 20006, (202) 785-1410.

Antique Tractors, Toys At Show

KEMPTON (Berks Co.) — The Antique Engine Tractor and Toy Club Inc. will hold its Seventh Annual show on Saturday, June 6 and Sunday, June 7 at the Kempton Community Center. Activities will start daily at 8 a.m. and continue throughout the day.

On Saturday there will be a slow engine contest at 11 a.m., a tractor parade at noon, a slow tractor race at 1 p.m., a teeter totter trial at 2 p.m., and an antique tractor pull with a professional sled at 3 p.m.

Sunday's activities will begin with a tractor parade at noon, a kiddie pedal pull at 1 p.m., a tractor barrel roll at 2 p.m., and blindfolded tractor driving at 3 p.m.

During both days there will be a flea market and demonstration of antique engines. There will also be a sale of homemade baked goods. Other food and refreshments will be available.

Kempton is located along Route 143 North of I-78. There is no charge for admission, but a $2 per car parking donation is requested.

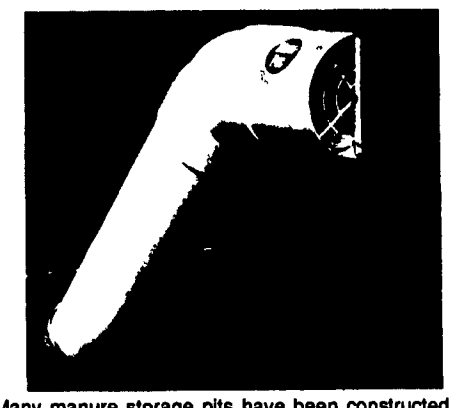
PUMP OUT PIT FAN



Many manure storage pits have been constructed without providing for ventilation of the pit, particularly in buildings constructed several years ago when pit storage was first popular.

A non-ventilated pit results in a build-up of harmful, caustic gases, such as carbon dioxide, hydrogen sulfide, methane, ammonia and mercaptans

Hydrogen sulfide and carbon dioxide are heavier than air and, as the level of pit waste rises closer to the slats, the gases are forced closer to the animals.

Results of inhaling these gases may be deep, fast breathing from CO^2. Hydrogen sulfide is one of the most toxic gases to animals and humans associated with liquid manure storage. This gas can cause severe irritation to the eyes and respiratory system and sometimes can result in death.

The Best of the Best

The Wheeling 2 oz. Seal of Quality coating represents the best of the best in the Wheeling Corrugating line of premium galvanized roofing and siding. Every panel that carries the 2 ounce coating assures you are getting the toughest, the most durable, the most corrosion resistant galvanized sheet available in today's marketplace.

2oz. Seal of Quality Wheeling

Genuine Old-Time Quality
Every Wheeling 2 oz. sheet is manufactured from heavy gauge steel, topped with an extra thick zinc coating, and formed into profiles that contribute strength and good looks. Build with a Wheeling 2 oz. sheet and you'll be working with the kind of durability and dependability that's been a standard in the industry for almost 100 years.

The Proof is in the Process
The performance behind the Wheeling 2 oz. Seal of Quality is possible because of Wheeling's patented Cook-Norteman manufacturing process. This technology allows a more consistent quality product, and a more uniform coating with unsurpassed zinc adhesion. The process takes more handling and more time, but the end result is a super premium panel that has its own limited 20-year performance warranty.

Dimensions and Specifications
If your building plans call for roofing and siding materials with exceptional corrosion resistance, minimum upkeep, and old-time toughness, you'll want to check the specs of Wheeling 2 oz. Seal of Quality galvanized.
Gauge: 28
Lengths Up to 40'
Steel: Full hard, 90,000 psi, cold rolled Wheeling-Pittsburgh carbon steel.
NOTE: * Premium Wheeling 2 oz. Seal of Quality zinc coated natural roofing and siding will outlast painted, regular galvanized or galvalume in most applications!

A Satisfied Customer...
JOHN R. RODGERS, of Belleville had three styles of fencing installed totaling a mile on his farm. John offers these comments. "I looked at others fencers and determined that Beaver Fence Systems had the people that could do a quality job and a quality fence to keep the cattle where I want them. The flexibility of the fence gives me full utilization of the land with maximum efficiency. The job was completed in two days including a barnyard fence, plus 6 and 4 wire pasture fencing."

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds
BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.
MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.
ON-FARM MIXING
A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that
- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

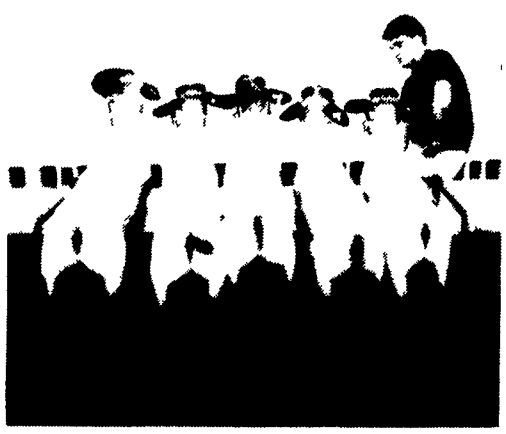
MEAT MATTERS MOST



HOME BRED lambs like these have been winning for me and my buyers in the Mid-Atlantic area. They LOOK GOOD. They HANDLE GOOD. They CUT GOOD. My latest triumph was Grand Champion carcass at the 1991 Keystone International Livestock Exposition. Check these stats.

In 1992, you're going to want to get more milk...

That's not easy.

Wet Brewers Grains can help increase your efficiency. Here's how:

Wet Brewers Grains add high-quality by-pass protein to your ration. The excellent palatability improves feed intake. And the better digestibility helps keep cows on feed. Call us for complete details soon.

The Eby Wrangler...
★ Better Looking ★ Better Built
★ Better Value

The Wrangler Model 2000-OH represents a new level of value in livestock trailers.

Its standard specifications, top-quality components and proven engineering are found in other Wrangler models. But the new 2000-OH is less expensive. By standardizing height and width and by limiting the number of optional accessories, Eby lowers the production costs for this model. Now you can get all our traditional craftsmanship in a top-value gooseneck.

Unlike other "budget" trailers on the market, the Wrangler 2000-OH achieves a price breakthrough without compromising quality. Consider these features, standard on the new Wranger 2000-OH:

- 7,000# Dexter Torque-Flex axles
- Steel-belted radial tires, 10-ply rating
- Aerodynamic, attractive design
- Sealed beam lights with enclosed, externally accessible wiring
- 2-year warranty

Specifications
- Available in 14', 16', 18', 20' lengths
- 7' Width
- 6'6" Inside height

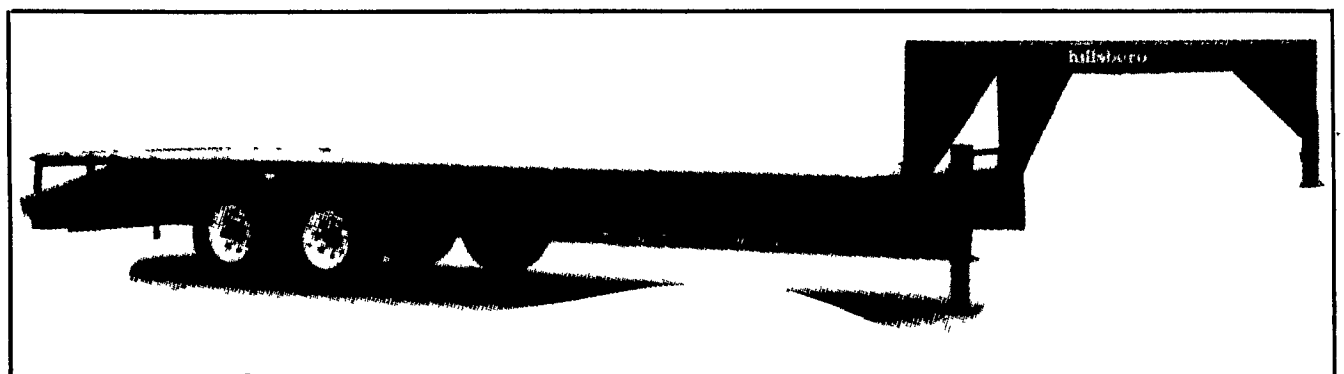
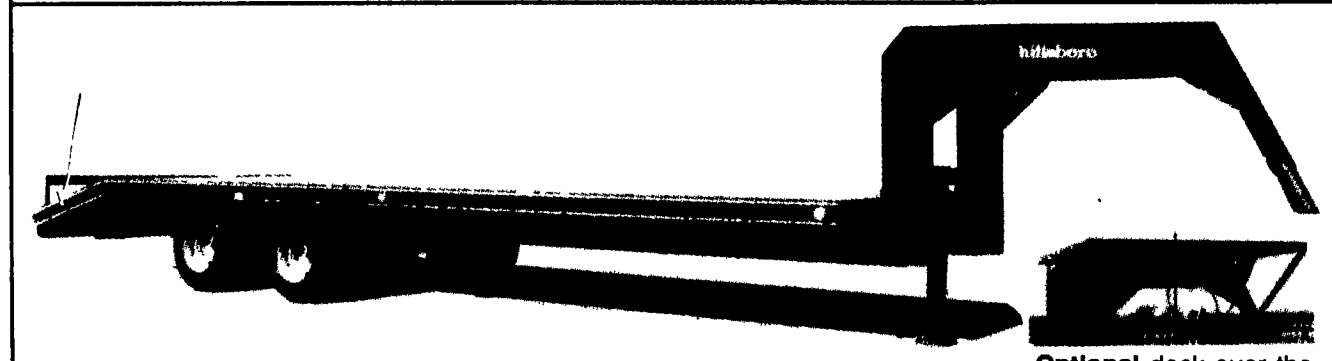
hillsboro flatbed trailer

with flip-up beaver tail



24 Foot Length Shown



28 Foot Length Shown

Optional deck over the neck is 7½ 'x8'

The FLIP-UP BEAVERTAIL raises and lowers in seconds -- slide out ramps are stored under the beavertail. The Hillsboro Flatbed features a full 96" deck width which is more value than the competition.

The Hillsboro Flatbed is available in two styles; the 20' and 24' trailer with standard neck, and the 28', 30' and 32' trailer with heavy duty neck.

VERSATILE — RUGGED — RELIABLE and REASONABLY PRICED!

The Hillsboro Flatbed Trailer with flip-up beavertail can be the one trailer that means lower cost for you. Here's why!!

VERSATILITY! That's what makes a Hillsboro trailer such a good investment. With the beavertail down it's an excellent trailer for moving wheeled equipment. Flip the beavertail up and it adds an extra four feet of deck space for hauling hay and other bulky loads.

HERE'S WHAT HILLSBORO QUALITY MEANS - All Hillsboro trailers are manufactured in precise jigs and fixtures which assures excellent alignment of axles, a better pulling trailer, a level and square trailer.

HILLSBORO WORKMANSHIP INCLUDES-Exceptional weld quality, material that is chemically cleaned, two coats of high quality paint, material strength engineered into the best flatbed value.

Corn Prices Under Threat If Act Limits Ethanol Use

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Limiting ethanol's role in the Clean Air Act Amendments (CAAA) will reduce ethanol demand, cut the amount of corn needed for ethanol production and, ultimately, depress corn prices, a representative of the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) told a House Agriculture subcommittee.

"This situation is especially discouraging for corn farmers who anticipated a significant new market for their product and to the rural communities that would gain job opportunities through value-added products. But most important is the loss of clean air benefits that can come from ethanol blends," said Missouri Corn Growers Association President Byron Fink, who testified on NCGA's behalf.

He asked the committee to consider the following, while the Environment Protection Agency (EPA) develops final rules for the CAAA reformulated gasoline program (RFG).

• The loss of the reformulated gasoline market would reduce the price farmers receive for corn by an average 24 cents per bushel.

• The impact of lower corn prices would increase government expenditures for feed grain support programs by an average $1.9 billion per year from 1992 through 2005.

• Farmer profitability would suffer. Despite higher deficiency payments to compensate for lower prices, net returns would be reduced by the difference between actual production and production eligible for program payments.

• The U.S. economy would suffer. The reduced value of corn output alone would cost the nation's economy $5.6 billion per year in lower gross output. Total employment in the nation's economy would be reduced by 134,694 jobs each year between 1992 and 2005.

Since 1979, ethanol production in the U.S. has increased steadily. In 1991, an estimated 390 million bushels of corn were converted to fuel ethanol. With the passage of the 1990 CAAA, NCGA anticipated a greatly enhanced market for ethanol blends. Corn utilization for ethanol production would more than double by 1995 because of the oxygenated fuel and reformulated gasoline program.

Critics claim ethanol increases some precursors to ozone. However, there is competent scientific evidence that has been accepted by EPA and Congress that additional evaporative emissions from ethanol blends do not contribute to ozone formation given the lower reactivity of those emissions and considering the reduction in tailpipe emissions.

PSU Offers Tours Of Research Farm

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Penn State's Haller Livestock-Forage Farm has been the site of many innovative pasture research projects over the years, and 1992 is no exception.

Interested groups are invited to arrange tours of the facility, located near the University Park Airport between State College and Bellefonte.

"We're in the final phase of a three-year project to compare grazing systems of different intensities — including systems where animals are moved to different pastures daily, weekly, or monthly," said Dr. Lowell L. Wilson, professor of animal science in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"We've seen several advantages of shorter grazing durations, including increased animal production per acre, better sheep performance when sheep and cattle are grazed together, and several other interesting observations."

Because of the farm's research nature, 12 subfarms have been developed to allow accurate comparisons of the different management systems. The need for effective but inexpensive fencing systems to keep animals on their assigned pastures prompted farm managers to design and install state-of-the-art fencing and watering equipment.

"One experimental grazing system tested this year was pasturing different combinations of livestock," Wilson said. "For instance, beef cows with calves and ewes with lambs are grazed on separate pastures, and then both are grazed on the same pasture simultaneously."

The farm's beef cow herd is crossbred Angus/Simmental/Charolais and was started 20 years ago. "The cows are bred artificially using commercially available bulls," Wilson said. "The 205-day adjusted weaning weights of the herd range from 575 to 675 pounds." The farm's sheep are from the dairy and animal science department's commercial and purebred ewe flocks.

The farm's research and demonstration projects make it popular with visitors. According to Peter LeVan, research assistant, and Richard Todd, research aide, more than 500 people have visited the farm to see the fencing and watering systems, to observe the selection and breeding methods used in the beef herd, and to learn more about the efficiency of different grazing management systems.

Tours of the Haller Farm can be arranged by contacting Dr. Lowell L. Wilson, 324 Henning Building, The Pennsylvania State University, University Park, PA 16802, (814) 863-3659.

SILO BALES!

Vermeer SW25-FL Silage Wrapper

Vermeer 504 Silage I Baler

Wrap Up Bigger Profits With High-Moisture Bales.

Introducing an entire system designed specifically for harvesting high-moisture hay and silage:

■ Vermeer Gator Mowers ... capable of cutting through virtually everything, from wet trampled hay to fire anthills

■ Vermeer 504 Silage Baler ... the only baler in the field today specifically designed for high-moisture baling, and able to handle the extra weight

■ Vermeer Silage Wrappers ... seal the freshness and nutritional value of balage and silage within a tightly stretch-film-wrapped package, one that's resistant to weather conditions and rodents

The Bottom Line ...

(1) valuable, highly palatable hay packages — individually wrapped — that feed out fresh and improve the health and performance of your herd,

(2) increased milk production and greater weight gains for your dairy herd and beef cow operations,

(3) a reduction in the costs of livestock inputs directly effecting your profit margins, less storage and equipment expense. Discover the savings, the quality, the improved livestock performance!

Dekalb Appoints Technical Services Representative

DEKALB, Ill. — DEKALB Swine Breeders announces that Dr. Richard Conger, DVM, has been hired to serve within marketing technical services for the company.

Conger received both his bachelor of science and agriculture degree and doctor of veterinary medicine degree from the University of Georgia.

Upon receiving his DVM, he accepted a position with Professional Nutritional Management located in Sioux Center, Iowa. Professional Nutrition Management is affiliated with Nobl Laboratories and Trans Ova Genetics. While at P.N.M., Conger's responsibilities were associated with large animal practice with concentration given to swine herd health.

Conger's responsibilities with Dekalb will be concentrated in the southeastern states, giving marketing technical service support.

IXL
Anti-friction Metal Conditioner

Efficiency is our Newest Resource

Reduces friction, heat and wear:
★ Gas & Diesel Engines
★ Transmissions
★ Gear Boxes And More!

Why Use IXL? It Pays!

IXL is carried to friction points in conjunction using a carrier such as oil, grease, hydraulic fluid, freon etc., initial treatment starts by treating the metal parts 3 to 5 microns deep, making the surface denser, harder and smoother; thereby, reducing friction, heat and wear up to 80%. This surface conditioning is extremely durable withstanding engine dry start up and other lube starvation problems. This results in minimum metal wear, giving maximum engine, gear and machine life. This product is bio-gradeable and non-toxic and does not contain moly, teflon or graphite.

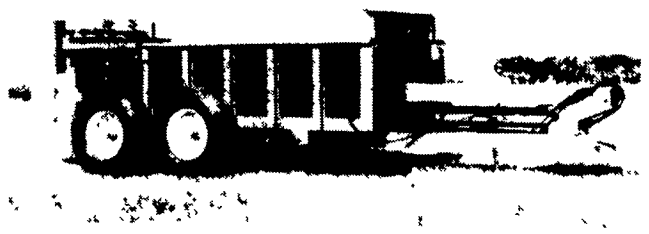
FREE YOURSELF FROM SPREADER CHAINS AND SAVE MONEY



The proven Hydra-Spread design can free you from the grief and maintenance of spreader apron chains for good!

This low maintenance spreader features solid poly boards both on the sides and the floor for slippery, no-stick performance. Hydraulic push power replaces the extensive mechanism needed in ordinary spreaders.'

Why pay more for yesterday's ideas and designs? The design of tomorrow is PRICED RIGHT and will be on the job for years. We deliver to your farm.

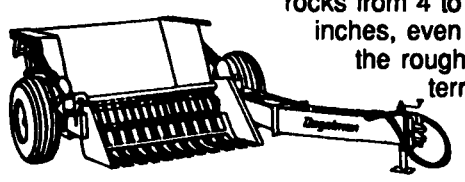
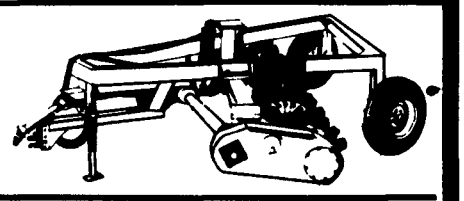
Man handles rocks from 4 to 36 inches, even on the roughest terrain



ROCK RAKE

The Degelman Rock Rake is designed to windrow small to medium sized rocks and other ground debris for easy picking. Rock-free fields mean less down-time, greater profits.



TIME IS MONEY and when your equipment is down, it costs you plenty. That's why Degelman engineered farm implements are a wise investment.

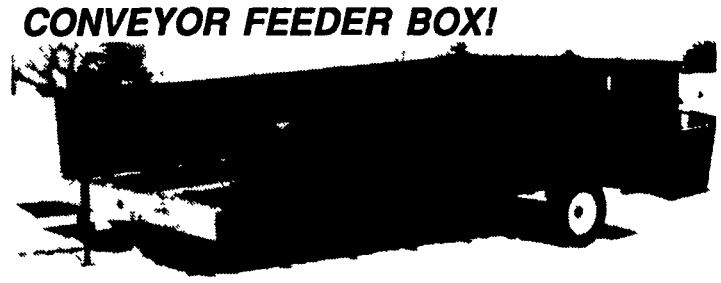
When Your Truck Reaches The Blower, Just Back Into Your RICHARDTON Conveyor Box, Dump Your Load And Race Away For The Next!

LOOK AT THIS ALL NEW STATIONARY CONVEYOR FEEDER BOX!



BIG CAPACITY: 10'x16'x32" stationary feeder holds 425 cubic feet or 340 bushels allowing your truck to return to the field for another load. The Richardton Model SF16 Stationary Feeder automatically and evenly feeds into the blower.

HYDRAULICALLY DRIVEN: For smooth trouble free operation. Two hydraulic control valves allow operator to run floor apron independently of cross conveyor and beaters.

EASY TO MOVE: Equipped with two-wheel axle, center hitch and jack. Hitch may be left on when feeder is in use.

Box Construction:
10' x 16' with 32" sides, 14 gauge steel sides, 3/4" plywood resin coated fiber overlay floor

Cross Conveyor:
22" wide, D662 pintle chain, variable hydraulic speed control, 34" long fold up extension adjusts up to 37" high

Hydraulic Requirements:
Approximately 13 GPM at 1750 PSI

Apron:
D667H pintle chain assemblies

Beaters:
Dual spiral type

Reversible Conveyor:
Delivery can be converted to the opposite side

When Buying A NEW COMBINE

DON'T OVERLOOK THE CASE IH AXIAL FLOW ADVANTAGE

the single rotor

With the SINGLE AXIAL FLOW ROTOR you get:

1) INCREASED PRODUCTION by the ability to start combining earlier in the day, and to keep combining later into the night.
2) BETTER GRAIN QUALITY because the ROTOR'S threshing action is much gentler than a conventional combine's cylinder.
3) LESS MAINTENANCE because there is NO strawwalker system to repair.

DON'T OVERLOOK THE HOOBER SERVICE ADVANTAGE

HOOBER'S experienced service people

With HOOBER's experienced SERVICE PEOPLE you get:

1) Fulltime Combine mechanics who work on combines year round, not just when you have a problem.
2) PEOPLE WHO CARE about your problems and want to fix them fast. so that you can get back to the field.
3) RECONDITIONED COMPONENTS which are not for sale, but are strictly reserved for use by the SERVICE DEPARTMENT to insert in customers machines who have major component failures.

THE SPIRIT OF VALUE

See Them Here Now...

THE "ALL NEW" 5000 SERIES TRACTORS

To truly earn the distinction of value, a tractor must surpass... not just reach... your requirements for power, reliability, comfort and cost effectiveness. John Deere proudly introduces three 40- to 60-hp tractors that do just this. And more.

The 5200 (40 hp), 5300 (50 hp) and turbocharged 5400 (60 hp). Three models, you choose which one is perfect for you.

OPTIONS

When you're comparing tractors...

CONSIDER ALL YOUR OPTIONS

There's more than one way to get the work done. Ford 32- to 55-PTO-hp tractors offer you options to do more.

Compare to other tractors in this category, and you'll find Ford utility tractors offer more choices:

- 8x2, 8x8 or 16x8 Dual Power™ transmissions
- Shuttle transmission
- Quietest cab in its class
- Your choice of hydraulic systems
- One to four remotes
- Four models
- Optional fuel capacity

So when you're comparing tractors, stop by and consider your options. You'll opt for a Ford utility tractor. More of what you need.

If Your Silo Needs New Life...
Try Our Poly Silo Liners
-THE ADVANTAGE OF A POLY LINER-
- Spoilage is reduced around doors.
- Feed is exposed to less oxygen - better fermentation.
- Allows storage of high moisture grains or dry grains in a conventional silo.
- Delays repair or replacement of corroded silos.
- Prevents corrosive acids from contacting silo wall - extends silo life.
- Quick installation.
- Effectively seals silos from air and weather.

The Liners Are Manufactured To Fit Most Standard Diameter Silos.

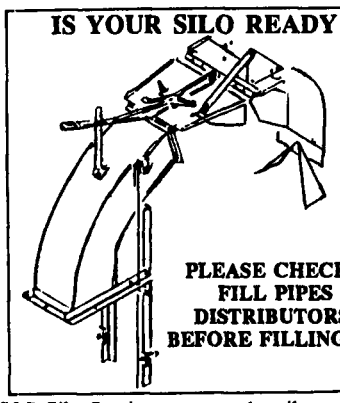
S & S SILO SERVICE

ATTENTION FARMERS
Strengthen And Reseal Your Silo With Shotcrete
STRONGER AND WILL OUT LAST PLASTER

IS YOUR SILO READY TO BE FILLED WITH GRASS SILAGE?



PLEASE CHECK YOUR FILL PIPES AND DISTRIBUTORS NOW BEFORE FILLING SEASON

S&S Silo Service prepares the silo surface by using a 3,000 lb. pressure washer, thus making the silo moist, making a much better surface to bond shotcrete. After shotcreting, S&S always takes away any roughness by applying a steel trowel finish.

The excellent bonding of shotcrete to the silo will keep out moisture and prevent mold from growing on the side of the silo.

WILL SERVICE 3 TO 4 DAYS OR LESS ON MOST JOBS

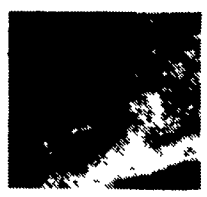
WARNING! DETERIORATING CONCRETE FROM CORN JUICE!

WARNING, ALL SILO OWNERS

Check your silo now for rotten staves. If you have been using your silo for 10 to 15 years for either corn silage or haylabe, it is time to SHOTCRETE.

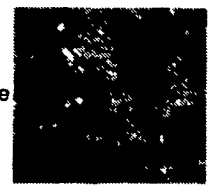
RESURFACES INTERIORS:
- Coats the silo's interior
- Protects feed in storage
- Durable, tough, acid-resistant
- Increases useful life
- Economical

Before The silo s interior with plaster damaged and stave exposed

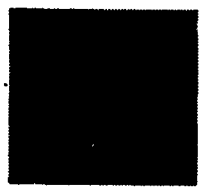


After The surface is reconditioned, and a new, thick, tough surface will protect stored feed

REPAIRS HOLES:
- Repairs even large holes
- Up to twice the strength of the original stave
- Rapid application
- Durable surface



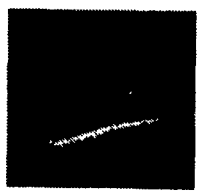
Before A hole is worn completely through the silo wall



After With the hole repaired by ShotCrete and a new surface applied, the silo is ready for years of use

EXTENDS USEFUL LIFE:
- Support for old foundations
- Special repairs can be made... quickly and economically
- Little or no forming needed
- Stronger than the original

Before The bottom part of the staves are completely worn away



After The ShotCrete System repairs and replaces the missing structure

Shotcrete is also good for repairing stone walls

Dairy Tips By Dr. Randy Lyle, Ph.D.

Purina Mills Dairy Consultant

Most of us look for better ways to accomplish tasks, regardless of our occupations. We attempt to identify better ways of doing things, in order to make our tasks simpler, or to accomplish them more efficiently or effectively.

Suppose you decide to do something differently on your dairy to improve the efficiency of your operation. What would that be? Use the "weakest link" approach. Identify the factor that is most limiting your efficiency.

Local dairy producers have identified the most limiting factors affecting efficiencies of their operations. Can you identify any of these problems on your farm?

FACTORS MOST LIKELY TO LIMIT DAIRY EFFICIENCY:

- ignoring importance of a good ration for dry cows
- light-weight first lactation heifers
- limited bunk space or hay rack space
- hoof problems
- low energy rations for fresh cows
- poor heat detection routine
- forage changes (type, quality, moisture, etc.)

If you need assistance with improvement of your dairy operation, contact your local Purina Mills representative. Superior nutrition, combined with sound management information, can help improve the efficiency of your dairy!
